Cement Men Gather
A Little Girl's Doll
Blue Island Fan Dancer
How Kansas Is Democratic

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 12—Typical Chicago day, sun struggling with smoke, welcome because it proves that factories are working; fine air from the lake, everybody walking fast, Chicago fashion. Hard to get into the hotel, because the Portland Cement men are having a convention. Americans are always having a convention. A slippery open space is prepared in the big dining room, conventions of tired business men dance in the evening to relax.

A little girl on the train would have enlightened the little red band of American Communists. Her mother stood on the rear platform with a fat baby, for fresh air. The child, extremely little, blue eyes, fair hair, blue suit trimmed with yellow fur, large doll with yellow hair, stood inside, responded to good morning by turning her head bashfully. "What's your name?" She shook her head. "Is that your little sister out there?" Another headshake, with more to follow.

"My little girl has a doll bigger than yours." Instantly the young lady turned around, and information poured out. "My doll is pretty big. Yes, that's my little sister. Her name is Anne; my name is Mary; I am four years old"—all the information you could ask. Mentioning her doll, and a bigger one, was mentioning her property, and when you mention property, you interest Americans, four years old or ninety. Not the doll or some one else, not a divided interest in some other doll, but HER doll.

"Fan dancer kills married suitor and self." Thus the polite copy reader heads it. The fan dancer, as a matter of fact, was living with a married man, who should have been more cautious. She did all the housework by day and danced at night. When she got tired of that, and he got tired of her, she was already 32 years old, not young for a fan dancer. She killed him and killed herself. To her mother the young woman wrote:

"If I go through with what I am about to do, I hope you won't feel too badly. Bill is growing impossible and he is going to get his medicine. I am sick and tired of his deceiving and one lie after another."

It takes men a long time to discover that "the female of the species" is sometimes really "deadly."

In New York city, Miss Vera Streets, young, handsome, strong chin, wrote poetry in the German language. That should have warned the man she killed, but it did not.

Today the fan dancer and the man she killed are lying side by side by one slabs in the little town of Blue Island, near here.

Will men take warning? "They will not."

Return, for a moment, to Topeka, Kan. After a talk with Governor Landon, reported here yesterday, Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, driving his own small car, said, "I want to show you something worth seeing," and drove around to the new Topeka high school.

Finished one year ago, this public school, which cost a million and a half dollars, stretches the length of two city blocks, in a semi-circle, with a magnificent tall tower rising in the midst of the Gothic structure.

There is no finer public school in this country, not even in California. The "fine building" is always the public school.

The governor of Kansas lives in a modest "executive mansion," built by a Topekan of long ago, who made money importing draught stallions and selling them to farmers. It is worth about $25,000. The state owns it. When the governor of a great state, in the capital of the state, lives in a $25,000 house, and the children study in a $1,500,000 high school, that is a DEMOCRATIC state, although it calls itself Republican.

Recently the people have been spending money more freely than during the depression, and even the few legislators that have practiced economy, as in Kansas, under Governor Landon, are inclined to spend. They say, in Kansas, the rain has fallen; the water level is up to normal; we shall have big crops; it is time to spend. Governor Landon tells the leaders, spend, by all means, whatever you have in your pocket, but do not spend next year's crops now.

This heading seemed like real news: "Henry Ford buys a horse." He did buy one, but it turned out to be a wooden one used to display harness in shops, purchased for the Ford museum. Henry Ford ought to have a real horse and ride around on it when he is a little Little Shirley Baker, 5, appears to be registering violent disapproval of a court order taking her from her grandmother's care and turning her over to the custody of her father, Solomon Baker, 33, of Norfolk street, Dorchester. In spite of Shirley's kicks and wails, however, Dad Baker is leaving Suffolk County courthouse with her, hopeful of being able, later, to console her.

BRAVES GET 4 FOR MOORE, BRANDT

By Joe Cashman

The Tribe traded Ed Brandt, southpaw pitching ace, and Randy Moore, popular outfielder, to the Brooklyn Dodgers for Catcher Al Lopez, Infielder Tony Cuccinello, and Pitchers Ray Benge and Bobby Reis.

A Tribal transaction had been expected as an announcement of importance had been promised by Quinn last night. But nobody imagined the deal would involve such outstanding players.

All the Dodgers mentioned in the trade are recognized stars with the exception of Reis, who didn't take up pitching until the middle of last season, though he had been up in the majors before as an infielder.

In return the Dodgers, who incidentally have been directed by Quinn for the past two years, get one of the outstanding southpaws

W. R. Hearst Lauds Catholic Church Stand Against Communism

To the Editor of the Boston Evening American:

PLEASE print a series of editorials strongly commending the Catholic Church for its militant attitude against Communism.

It is an inspiring position, reminiscent of the church's mightiest and most vigorous eras.

It is another crusade arousing the people against the enemies of religion and of the social organization.

It is in line with the splendid recent stand of the church against immorality on the screen, an initiative which other churches followed, and which almost immediately purified the movies and made them fit to appeal to the decent majority of the public.

The church's stand against the evil of Communism is even greater than its cinema stand, and more deep reaching by far.

It is a stand against political anarchy, against

HARVARD, B. U. AND TUFTS IN LAW PLEDGE

Four major colleges and two outstanding schools agreed, unqualifiedly, today to strictly comply with the Teachers' Oath Law.

The presidents of Harvard University, Tufts College, Wellesley College and Boston University gave that assurance to Attorney-General Paul A. Dever.

The announcement marked the beginning of the end of a long drawn out battle, which centered around belated refusals by certain professors who had announced intention of refusing to take the oath unless they could make amendments.

Similar assurance was given Dever by representatives from Mount Hermon School and Andover-Newton Theological School, to which irregular oaths have been returned.

The statement came from the attorney-general today following a State House conference requested and attended by President Conant of Harvard, President Cousens of

HARVEY'S MILLEN FEE

Gives His $1000 to Victim's Widows

By WINN BROOKS

George Stanley Harvey, counsel for the electrocuted slayers, Murton and Irving Millen, today turned his $1000 "fee for services rendered" over to the four families of the men slain by the Millen-Faber gang.

He accepted, from Governor Curley, a single silver dollar as the sum total of his reward for 15 months of Millen-Faber case services.

THE PRICE HE PAID

Yes, but something more. Because I know that Harvey, who didn't want the case in the beginning, and took it only at the command of the court, sacrificed his health and a small fortune defending the Millen brothers.

Harvey never had any doubt about the Millens' guilt but he was sincerely convinced, from the beginning to their execution, that they were legally insane.

And today he turned over to Governor Curley the $1000 check he received from Norfolk County for defending the Millens and requested that it be divided among the widows of the four men slain by the brothers the state ordered him to defend.

SPLIT $1,000 FOUR WAYS

So the $1,000 that was Mr. Harvey's will go to the families of Patrolman Frank O. Haddock and Forbes McLeod, both of Needham, C. Fred Sumner of Lynn and Ernest G. Clark of Fitchburg.

"Apportion it as you see fit," Harvey told the Governor, "and do so without the advice of your council."

BIG NAVY REJECTED, JAPAN LEAVES PARLEY

Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press

London, Dec. 12—Japan's demand for equality in naval strength was rejected at the International Naval Conference today by the four other great naval powers and the British Dominions.

American, British and Italian delegates flatly rejected the Japanese proposal, and had the support of the British Dominions, while France expressed opposition, chiefly on grounds of procedure.

It was understood the British took the lead in opposing the Japanese demands.

The meeting broke up at noon, with the Japanese leaving hastily. Although they are usually the first to depart, their hurried exit created the impression at the moment that they were walking out of the conference.

Well-informed sources said, however, the Japanese merely wished to submit certain questions to Tokio.

French and Italian opposition to Japanese equality was understood to have resulted from the Japanese statement that they considered a common upper limit of naval tonnage should be confined to the United States, Britain and Japan, because there were no varying interests among those three.

The South Africans, Canadians and Australians were reported to Calls Vanderbilt Fortune 'Curse'

New York, Dec. 12 (INS)—Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt has renounced the Vanderbilt millions and no longer will accept one penny of the income from her daughter's fortune, the Evening Journal said in an exclusive story today.

Sick and tired of the mess the fight for little Gloria has made of her life, the Journal added, Mrs. Vanderbilt called on Surrogate James A. Foley in his chambers here yesterday and informed him of her decision. The story continued:

"She made it perfectly clear, however, that while she is giving up the income of approximately $50,000 a year, she is not relinquishing her right to have her daughter on Saturdays and Sundays.

"Neither is she giving up the right to regain complete custody, that will continue, she declared, as long as there is a breath of life in her body.

"Her decision is her answer to both Supreme Court Justice John

TYDINGS FEARS PANIC FROM U. S. SPENDING

MOTHER, 4 CHILDREN SAVED FROM FLAMES IN WOBURN

With their coats over their heads to protect them, Thomas Kenney and Hugh E. Marshall dashed up a blazing stairway at 87 Winn street, Woburn, today, and rescued Mrs. Agnes Mularkey, 39, and her four young children.

When Kenney and Marshall smashed in the front door of the Mularkey apartment, after observing smoke issuing from the windows, they were confronted by a sheet of flame which cut across the stairway.

With escape cut off by the stairway to the lower floor, Kenney and Marshall each took one of the younger children in their arms and led the mother and the other two to the third floor attic.

There they found a door leading into the other apartment of the duplex house.

They guided mother and children through this doorway and down two flights of stairs to safety.

FOR EXCITING CHRISTMAS GIFTS

If You Think You're in a Flutter over Christmas, you ought to see me. I'm having the time of my life traipsing up and down Filene's. No elevators for me—I might miss something! The hardest part of shopping Filene's is coming down to earth—and realising I can't use pages and pages. But I simply must rave about Filene's Snow Train. And the Hooded Ski Jacket I saw there! All the smart young things in town have fallen in love with it. I've sketched it with the Hood up—and also with the Hood un-zipped to make a colorful splash—and a sailor collar! It's smartly tailored in tunic style—has two roomy pockets and a sash with cute pom-poms. The Hooded Ski Jacket is $7.95. Comes in navy and red—brown and orange—Dartmouth and Kelley greens! The Whole Hooded Ski Suit—$15.76. See it in Filene's Snow Train today—or at least tomorrow—it's on the Second Floor.

She Can Drink Milk or Water

in a Nursing Bottle! Think how any little girl would love that! (The liquid actually goes into the nipple). If you want some fun —and ideas about what little girls like—dash into Filene's Toy Shop. Watch the "little mothers" years over this lovable infant baby that has a nurse tending it. Notice how impressed they are by this baby doll that cries when you take away its pacifier—and is mama's own sweet baby again when you give it back. My —how the little girls love this baby doll that requires such loving attention and care. This cunning baby doll is 14 inches high. $3.95 brings her own layette—soap, powder, safety pins, sponge, towel, dress, bonnet, rubber panties, booties and jacket. Baby—Layette and all—$2.95 in Filene's Toy Shop, Franklin and Hawley street Building. Write or phone Hubbard 4250 till 9 p. m.

Men Are Easy to Please

—whether you contemplate spending a little or a lot—if you shop in Filene's Men's Gift Shop. I've sketched two swanky gifts he is sure to like! One a black or brown grained leather pouch with space to tuck the pipe—and a good big section for tobacco. There's no chance of pipe odors escaping and getting into his clothes! And a pipe comes with it—$2.50. See the Men's travelling cases with NINE well made fittings—my little sketch couldn't possibly do it justice. It's of grained leather—has zipper opening. Give this to any man that travels a lot—or to a young chap at college and ten-to-one you'll fit for life. In black or brown—$3. Filene's Men's Gift Shop is on the street floor in the Men's Store.

It is a stand against the domination of government by the most ignorant and most incapable and most corrupt element of the community.

It is a stand against the exploitation of the whole people by the most covetous and most callous and most cruel and most vicious and vindictive classes of the social organization.

It is a stand against crime, against the wholesale murder and plunder which have prevailed in Communistic countries, and which are characteristic of the chaos which follows the overthrow of the social order, the removal of all restraint upon the lowest elements, and the eventual establishment of bloody and brutal class tyranny.

It is a stand for freedom, for individual liberty, for universal opportunity, for law—and equality before the law.

It is a stand for peace and order, for family rights, for property rights, for human rights.

It is a stand in behalf of a government of ALL the people by ALL the people for ALL the people; a stand in support of true American ideals and institutions.

IT is a stand which every American church must take, and which no church can fail to take and remain a truly American church.

It is a stand which expresses the full duty of the church as an evangelical institution, and which also includes the patriotic duty which a timid and neglectful Federal Government has failed to perform.

I am not a Catholic. I am an Episcopalian, but I honor the magnificent courage, the inspiring crusading spirit, the high sense of obligation to God and mankind with which the Catholic Church has met this sinister Communistic menace.

I hope that my church and other American churches will join hands with the Catholic Church, and present an unbroken moral front to resist the attack of the modern infidel host against law and liberty, peace and order, religion and civilization.

MILLEN VICTIMS GET $1000

that was, and is in all such cases, virtually an order.

Convinced the Millens were insane, he fought for them in the State Superior Court, in the State Supreme Court, in the Federal District Court, the Federal Court of Appeals, and finally in the United States Supreme Court—of last appeal.

AN INADEQUATE FEE

I watched him work day and night for nearly a year and a half, exclusively in behalf of the Millens, because he believed them insane and he had a job, a duty to do.

And I know that during that time his health broke down and he was obliged to turn away hundreds of prospective clients for whom he had no time.

His fee is set by law: it is $500 in the case of each defendant when counsel is appointed by the court. It is a totally inadequate fee, as he pointed out to the governor, suggesting that the presiding justice in such cases should be allowed to set the fee. Governor Curley agrees and this law may be changed.

Harvey carried on his fight for the Millens in the face of public opinion and adverse publicity because he was convinced they should not, under the law he knows, die.

So it is a rather decent thing that Harvey did today.

MEEHAN ASSAILS SEC LAWYERS

Washington, Dec. 12 (INS)—SEC attorneys today were pictured as Federal agents "blasting a man's character" without the slightest factual evidence, by Monroe Goldwater, counsel for Michael J. Meehan, charged by the commission with "rigging the market" in the common stock of the Bellanca Aircraft Corporation.

Goldwater's charge was made while Raymond J. De Voe, a government witness, was on the stand. De Voe is senior member of the New York Stock Exchange member firm of De Voe, Dyke and Sperry.

He was pictured by SEC counsel William Gruber as "an agent of Meehan's" in the latter's reputed efforts to raise the price of the stock of the Delaware Manufacturing Company.

Government counsel attempted to show connivance between Meehan and De Voe over 68,000 shares of Bellanca stock, held by Meehan and contracted for by the latter's wife. De Voe represented that he at one time had been interested in the purchase of Bellanca stock, but after a visit to the plant in New Castle, Del., he declined an offer from Meehan to become half-owner in a block of 50,000 shares at $6 a share.

SENATOR URGES BALANCING OF BUDGET

New York, Dec. 12 (UP)—Senator Millard E. Tydings, Maryland Democrat, declared that "unless the Roosevelt administration changes its spending policies and quits borrowing to meet deficits, panic will ensue."

Tydings spoke last night before the Southern Society of New York, delivering an attack on administration fiscal policies, but standing firmly for what he termed fundamental Democratic principles. Calling on the administration to balance the budget, Tydings said:

"It is a necessary thing for our government to undertake speedily, Nations no more than individuals can spend themselves into prosperity, or out of debt, or away from difficulty—any more than a drunkard can drink himself sober."

Tydings said that when the present administration program is carried out the national debt would be 36,000 million dollars. He added:

"Apparently, few persons in this country are conscious that the government of the United tates alone has an average first mortgage of $1000 on every American farm and home in the land."

Tydings declared that nearly two-thirds of the assets of banks insured by the Federal Deposit Corporation were in government securities, where only one-half of the assets of these banks were in government holdings at the end of the war.

He warned that a "saturation point would be reached by the banks so far as government bonds are concerned, with possibility of eventual lack of market among banks for such securities.

have spoken in opposition to the Japanese demand for equality.

THREE POINTS

A spokesman for the American delegation asserted the speech of Norman H. Davis, chairman of the United States delegation, in opposition to Japan's proposals, revolved around three main points:

1—Adoption of the plan would be an enormous increase in construction, rather than a decrease.

2—The proposal did not take into account the different naval needs of the powers.

3—It would upset the equilibrium established by the Washington and London naval treaties, and the United States felt no change had occurred in the international situation which was sufficient to warrant a naval change.

VOICE FOR ALL

The French emphasized their objection to the Japanese demands was based on the grounds that all powers should have a voice and rights under any general agreement, it was understood.

They asserted they were excluded from previous consideration when the limitation treaties were drafted.

Informed persons said the conference would resume sessions tomorrow, when discussions along the same lines would continue and the Japanese would answer numerous questions.

Self Rule Restored In Egypt

Copyright, 1935, by The Associated Press

Great Britain consented to Egypt's return to the self-government form of the suspended 1923 constitution after a persistent nationalist, anti-British campaign.

These swift developments, coming on the very day the cabinet of Premier Tewfik Nessim Pasha was to resign, did away with the necessity for the resignations.

The constitution provides for a senate and chamber of deputies, and takes control of Egypt's internal affairs out of British hands.

It does not, however, affect Britain's control of Egyptian foreign affairs or the British military protectorate.

Britain's surprise decision was believed actuated by the fact that nationalist students yesterday visited all prospective candidates for what was then thought would be a new Cabinet and told them bluntly only reinstitution of the constitution would be acceptable.

Otherwise, the students insisted, the anti-British rioting of recent weeks would continue.

ITALIAN PEACE UP TO LEAGUE

Scouts indicated aDsta was massing 150,000 Ethiopians at the headquarters of the Juba River, inspired them to almost berserk war frenzy.

KING GEORGE INTERVENES TO FORCE ITALIAN PEACE

London, Dec. 12 (AP)—Reports that King George intervened personally with the government to force through the Anglo-French proposals for peace between Italy and Ethiopia circulated today in diplomatic circles.

The king was understood to be gravely concerned lest the Italo-Ethiopian crisis develop into a European conflict.

King George recently held audiences with high cabinet ministers and saw Anthony Eden, minister for League of Nations affairs, before the cabinet meeting Monday which considered the peace program, drawn up by Foreign Minister Sir Samuel Hoare and French Premier Pierre Laval.

Royal intervention in government affairs is rarely invoked, although the monarch has the prerogative to act when he feels that national security is menaced.

Diplomatic sources reported that King George disausded Eden from resigning from the Cabinet, and urged him to assist in bringing peace quickly.

The British press displayed prominently today United States Senator Borah's angry criticism of the Anglo-French proposals for peace in East Africa as an indication of America's attitude toward the program.

The Daily Herald coupled Senator Borah's attack with other caustic dispatches from Moscow and South Africa, calling them a demonstration that the "whole world is enraged."

Ethiopian Church Head Hails Offer of Peace

Addis Ababa, Dec. 12—The greybearded Abuna Cyril, religious ruler of Ethiopia for seven years, described the Anglo-French peace plans today as "words of God."

"Let God inspire acceptable conditions," said the Egyptian ecclesiastic, high bishop of the Coptic Christian church of Ethiopia.

"I am happy to see the sacred ties of Akuum with Ethiopia, at least recognized. The Holy City and the Provinces of Tigre, which has given Ethiopia 17 emperors, are as life blood to this empire."

Emperor Haile Selassie Rejects Laval-Hoare Plan

With Emperor Haile Selassie at Desye, Ethiopia, Dec. 12 (Havas) —Emperor Haile Selassie rejected today the Laval-Hoare proposals for peace between Italy and Ethiopia.

The Emperor asserted:

"The Ethiopian government cites its previous declarations, notably that of October 8, to show that Ethiopia never wished and does not wish war. But today we are bound to defend our soil which Italy has violated.

Duce Spokesman Warns Of Optimism on Peace

Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press

Rome, Dec. 12—A spokesman for Premier Benito Mussolini warned the world today against "excessive optimism" over peave proposals.

He emphasized the plan evolved by Great Britain and France for settling the Ethiopian conflict was only "a basis for negotiations," and said Italy might want to "ask some questions" before replying.

If Duce's reply, he explained, will go back to France and Great Britain, because Italy does not consider the League of Nations as having acted in the matter.

PEERS Free British LORD

ANCIENT RITE INVOKED

London, Dec. 12 (AP)—Scarlet-garbed peers of England today acquitted Lord De Clifford, 28 years old, of a charge of manslaughter arising from an automobile accident.

The verdict of innocence was returned by the members of the House of Lords after six hours of juridical pageant such as had not been seen in England in the last 34 years.

"There is no evidence of criminal negligence or even negligence."

Consequently, he argued, there was no case against De Clifford.

"How say you, my lord—guilty or not guilty?"

Around him, seated in a horseshoe tier, the solemn tribunal of his fellow peers, in crimson robes and cocked hats, looked down on him in judgment.

Lord De Clifford himself was uncovered and without his robes. He listened intently while the sergeant-at-arms unrolled a parchment scroll and proclaimed:

"Our sovereign lord the king strictly commands all persons to keep silence on pain of imprisonment!"

Then the trial began.

A picturesque ceremony dating back to the Magna Carta and the reign of King John (1199-1216 A. D.), the trial invoked for the first time since 1901 the age-old prerogative of Britain's peers to transfer felony charges against one of their number from the common criminal courts to the House of Lords.

The historic privilege is shared by all peers except bishops, who were denied it because they refused to admit the jurisdiction of a law court and thus could not claim any rights as peers.

The case arose from an automobile accident at Kingston-on-Thames in which Douglas George Hopkins, a commoner, was killed.

Seven years ago, at the age of 21, he married Miss Dorothy Evelyn Meyrick, one of the three daughters of the late Mrs. Kate Meyrick, London's most famous night club proprietor.

Mrs. Meyrick, who from 1927 to 1931 constantly was having troubles with the police for liquor law violations, going to jail several times, saw two of her daughters marry into the peerage before her death Jan. 19, 1933.

Hill Billy Girl Loses Plea For New Trial in Slaying

LIZZY HOLLEY JUANITA HILTON

That the light of learning can shine on despite imprisonment in a cell, is here shown as Edith Maxwell (right), hill billy teacher who killed her father, instructs two other girl prisoners, Lizzie Holley and Juanita Hilton (left to right), in their A, B, C's.

Wise, Va., Dec. 12 (AP)—Judge H. A. W. Skeen today denied a new trial for Edith Maxwell, 21-year-old school teacher sentenced to 25 years for the murder of her father.

Miss Maxwell broke into tears when Judge Skeen announced his decision after more than three hours of argument by attorneys.

"There is evidence upon which this verdict can stand," Judge Skeen said. "Therefore I overrule the motion of the defense for a new trial."

Attorneys for the girl announced they would carry the appeal to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

The court granted a sixty-day suspension of sentence in order to permit the defense to file its application for a writ of error to the Supreme Court.

Asserting "immaterial" and "improper" evidence had been used against her, attorneys for Miss Maxwell asked Judge Skeen to set aside the jury verdict.

Jaunty Hat

The 21-year-old defendant and school teacher, wearing an attractive green dress and brown hat set at a jaunty angle, gazed solemnly at defense counsel A. A. Skeen as he opened argument.

She says she struck the fatal blows with a slipper when her father tried to whip her for staying out late.

Particularly "vicious," said Skeen, was the failure of the court to instruct the jury as to the lesser degrees of murder other than first degree.

In striking contrast to the large crowd which packed the big Wise County courthouse during the trial last month, only a few spectators came to hear the argument for the new trial.

Miss Maxwell came into court on the arm of her brother, Earl, after running the gauntlet of cameramen as she walked the 25 paces to the courthouse from the jail, where she has been held.

She appeared calm as she listened when Skeen asserted the court erred in instructing the jury only as to murder in the first degree.

Hits Evidence

Commenting on what he termed improper evidence, Skeen said the jurors were not trained to observe the "fine spun distinction" between evidence admitted for the purpose of contradiction and evidence admitted as affirmative proof of guilt.

He said the court erred in permitting a county officer to quote a remark purportedly made by the defendant's mother while mother and daughter were being taken from the mountain home of the Maxwells at Pound to the Wise County jail.

At the trial in November the officer quoted Mrs. Maxwell, herself under indictment for murder, as saying on the trip:

"God knows I never harmed him. I begged for him all the time."

Read Edith Maxwell's own life story, beginning next Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and continuing daily in the Boston Evening American.

BLIND, Tragic LOVE

WELLS' FATE NEAR JURY

Miss Martin was thrown from the third floor window of a Tremont street hotel on July 15.

Yesterday a police stenographer had read into the record of the trial before Judge Thomas J. Hammond Wells' alleged confession of the crime, quoting him as saying:

"I thought it would be more merciful if I killed her than if I just left. What would she do if I left—go crazy or to an insane asylum?"

Blind Love

"Every morning the blind man would go out and get her breakfast," Mrs. Mary Miller of Charlestown, maid in a Bowdoin street hotel where the girl and Wells previously lodged, testified.

"Last January she was ill—she complained of terrible pains. He took care of her for a week. She would put her arms round him and kiss him.

"I would see him sitting by her bed when I was tidying up the room. She cried a great deal and he tried to soothe her. He would only leave to go and bring back food to her. I thought they seemed to love each other a great deal."

Sadie Donnelly, maid in the hotel where the "Street Scene" tragedy took place, gave similar testimony.

"She was his eyes. I never heard the girl or Wells quarrel," she testified. "The day she died I saw him leave the hotel afterward—feeling his way down.

Wells to Tell

"I never saw the girl in the same room with Wells—though he used to go out and get their breakfast. She was always in the other room of the two adjoining rooms they occupied when I was cleaning up.

"I thought they seemed to love each other a great deal."

Four or five witnesses, including Wells, himself, were to conclude the "mercy killing" defense. Indications were that the case would go to the jury late today following closing arguments by Attorney John Walsh for the blind, itinerant musician whose home is Detroit, and by Assistant District Attorney William J. Sullivan for the government.

Wells is the first blind man ever to be placed in the shadow of the electric chair in a Suffolk County first-degree murder case.

Also present were Payson Smith, commissioner of education; Dean Coolidge of Wellesley College, Paul J. Brainerd of Mount Hermon School and Everett C. Herrick of Andover-Newton, together with Attorneys Charles B. Rugg and Harold S. Davis.

At the conclusion of the half-hour conference, Dever announced:

"The discussion was about those professors with sensitive scruples relative to the oath.

"There were statements by the heads of the institutions in which they expressed their desire to cooperate with the Commonwealth to effect a mutually satisfactory compliance with the oath.

ULTIMATUM HINTED

"There will be further conferences between heads of institutions and the non-conforming faculty members."

Some belief was expressed, although without corroboration of the report, that the attorney-general had delivered an ultimatum to the effect that institutions continuing non-conforming faculty members in a teaching capacity were in danger of losing their charters.

The conference followed closely on the heels of Harvard Professor Kirtley F. Mather's capitulation in the fight he has waged against the oath since the beginning.

Professor Mather's capitulation was revealed to be the result of an ultimatum from President Conant.

In a public statement announcing he has signed the oath, Professor Mather indicated he had been faced with two alternatives: "to accede to the request of the president of the university, or to submit my resignation."

His statement also indicated that careful investigation had been made regarding a test case on the oath but had failed and that Dr. Mather had finally signed the oath rather than cause Harvard unpleasantness.

This was indicated in the section of his statement reading:

"We have done our best to find some way of testing this law as an infringement on academic freedom, without involving the university in the dispute over legal technicalities, but we can find no way of doing so."

But even in surrender Professor Mather retains some defiance and this may result in further difficulties insofar as definite acceptance of his oath is concerned.

In addition to turning in his signed oath in the form insisted upon by Commissioner of Education Payson Smith, Professor Mather plans to return the entire oath to which he subscribed November 19 and which was returned as unsatisfactory by Commissioner Smith.

Dr. Alfred C. Lane, Tufts professor who tendered his resignation to the trustees rather than sign the oath, said today:

AUSTRIA Ready Again FOR KING

HURLS DEFY TO HITLER

Vienna, Dec. 12—Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, uniting the destinies of its former ruling House of Hapsburg, challenged Hitlerism today with a call for Austrian leadership of Central Europe.

Apparently clearing the way for restoration of the Hapsburgs, the vice-chancellor proclaimed that there was no obstacle to enthronement of Archduke Otto, as long as he accepted the program of the assassinated Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss for a powerful, sovereign Austrian nation.

The prince, who has become virtual dictator of Austria, asserted in a speech last night to the patriotic "Fatherland front" that Austrian ideals ultimately must prevail throughout the Germanic nations.

FISCH LINK TO RANSOM CASH REPORTED IN PARKER'S HANDS

By KENNETH T. DOWNS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 12—Within the last two weeks bulky evidence purporting to link Isidor Fisch to Lindbergh ransom cash spent abroad has been received from Germany by Ellis Parker, the famous Mount Holly detective, who is investigating the "crime of the century" for Governor Hoffman.

This startling piece of information was put into circulation today by sources close to Parker, though the homespun sleuth would not comment on the truth of it.

"That story didn't come from me," Parker told International News Service. "I won't either deny or confirm the truth of it. I don't want to be rude but I won't comment on it."

FISCH SPENT BILLS

The venerable detective readily admitted, however, that he has evidence Fisch spent hundreds of dollars of the ransom gold certificates in New York before he sailed to Germany to die in 1933.

He referred to the story of George Steinweg, a steamship agent, who said that Fisch paid $300 in gold certificates which he later was convinced were ransom bills in booking reservations for the trip to Germany on August 18, 1933.

Steinweg's story was that Fisch didn't sail immediately, that before the swarthy little Bronx furrier did embark he exchanged another $600 of the alleged ransom bills for reichsmarks.

"There's nothing new in that, though," Parker said. "Plenty of people knew it as the trial, but everything then was against Hauptmann."

"JAFSIE" ACTIVE

In New York, Dr. John F. ("Jafsie") Condon, the trusted ransom intermediary who has been the target of some sharp statements by defense lawyers and Parker lately, was reported to be active again.

It was said he had gone to Abe Samuelson, a Bronx cabinet maker who built the ransom money box and claimed to have built the kidnap ladder for Hauptmann, and ordered Samuelson to build a replica of the ladder.

Samuelson, though parts of his story were undenied, was such a puzzling figure he was not called as a witness by either defense or prosecution at the trial.

Mrs. Hauptmann Took Money Package Abroad

New York, Dec. 12 (INS)—To this day, New Jersey and Federal authorities have been unable to account for $18,000 of the $50,000 ransom paid to Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the Lindbergh baby, the Evening Journal says today in a copyrighted story based on hitherto unpublished testimony given to police soon after the Bronx carpenter's arrest.

The police, according to the newspaper, are still wondering if perhaps Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, the convicted slayer's arm-twisting wife, didn't inadvertently give them the answer to the riddle of the missing money, which they were too slow-witted at the time to realize.

In the first few days after Hauptmann's arrest, Mrs. Hauptmann was subjected to one of the most relentless grillings in New York police annals, Following is her testimony, taken, according to the Journal's account, from the police records:

Q—"What did your husband give you for expenses when you went to Germany in the latter part of 1932?"

A—"He bought for me my ticket, and then I take $300 in what we call travel check money. I have also with me an envelope and money for his mother which he gives me to take home."

Q—"What was in the envelope which he sent to his mother with you?"

A—"I do not know. He told by me not to open the envelope because he wants it should be private and that there is 70 one dollar bills inside. It makes a big package and thick which I carry in my handbag."

Q—"You mean you have never learned how much money was in that envelope?"

A—"No. I do not know."

Brother and Sister Drown

MRS. BERNICE HOOD

SAFE IN 'KIDNAPING'

Her friend, Mrs. Mary Geary, w ithwthom she lived in Roundy street, had reported that Mrs. Hood was dragged, screaming, into a car by two men who called for her.

Another friend, a Manchester man, reported receiving a mysterious phone call from her during which she was prompted, he said, by a man.

Although these angles of the case remained unexplained, it finally turned out that Mrs. Hood had accompanied her estranged husband, Henry C. Hood, to New York, where he lives, to be present today at a court hearing on his petition for divorce.

Mrs. Hood and her husband, who recently came here and adopted Mrs. Hood's son by a previous marriage, both assured Police Chief Joseph Murrey of Beverly, over the telephone, that there was no cause for police action in the case.

Chief Murrey said the case was closed.

Mrs. Hood said that the two men Mrs. Geary had mistaken for kidnapers were her husband and a friend of hers.

MYSTERY CALL

Six hours after Mrs. Hood vanished, Joseph Cousens, 28, of Sea street, Manchester-by-the-Sea, a friend of Mrs. Hood, received a phone call from her which mystified him completely, he told police. He said the following conversation ensued:

"Hello, Joe."

"Hullo."

"Know who this is?"

"No, who is it?"

"It's Bunnie."

"Where are you?"

Cousens said he heard the voice of a man, apparently prompting her.

"Who's with you?"

HEARD MAN'S VOICE

Cousens said he heard the man's voice again, prompting.

"I came down here about my divorce. I want you to get me $1000 bond right away. I have to have it to get out of New York or I will have to go behind the bars."

Cousens said he had no idea what this meant, and he told her:

"I haven't $1000."

"et it from a friend. Wire it to (an address on 204th street). I am going to reverse the charge to you."

Cousens said he had seen Mrs. Hood early last night.

Cousens told police he had been present at a discussion of divorce plans between Mrs. Hood and her husband on Thanksgiving.

At this time Patrolman Harry Monios of the Beverly police advised Mr. and Mrs. Hood with regard to the adoption and Hood took the boy, who had been boarding out in Salem, back with him to New York.

Mrs. Hood disappeared about 11:30 p. m. and the call Cousens reported was made between 5 and 5:30 this morning.

SCHOOL HEADS PROBE 'SLUSH FUND,' SEEK BACKERS

Behind closed doors today at school headquarters, Superintendent of Schools Patrick T. Campbell and the board of superintendents met for the purpose of getting to the bottom of the alleged attempt to raise a "slush fund" of $20,000 to "freeze" the list of 420 temporary teachers.

Superintendent Campbell told his colleagues he wants the board to use every possible means to learn the names of persons responsible for the attempt to raise the fund and that drastic action will be taken against them if their identities become known.

Superintendent Campbell said:

"I am continuing my investigation with the idea of submitting all information to the school committee at next Monday night's meeting, for the board to deal with as it sees fit.

"We know the names of four temporary teachers who attended the meeting at which it was stated that if the girls would contribute to each the list might be 'frozen.'

"The investigation will continue in an effort to find out who called the meeting and who made the proposition to raise a fund. If we can find out who the sponsors were they will be dealt with in a drastic manner."

School Committeeman Maurice J. Tobin has announced he will ask for a public hearing to get to the bottom of the matter at Monday's meeting.

Five Offer Blood To P. O. Employe

EVERETT DROPS 10 POLICE

Notice they were to be laid off because of lack of funds was served this afternoon on 10 out of 16 police officers appointed in Everett two months ago.

In the notice by Police Chief George O. Kenney the 10 officers were told there would be no work for them after Monday.

The officers immediately went to the State House, where they conferred with State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, member of the State Emergency Finance Board.

Hurley ordered a hearing for tomorrow afternoon

At the hearing, according to the treasurer, Everett officials will be asked to explain why 16 new men were appointed when the State Emergency Finance Board gave permission to hans only six.

'Rat' Cry Ruse For Till Dipper

"Look out for the white rat."

When Albert Vecchione, 24, single, of Courtland street, Everett, shrieked this alarm in a crowded Everett department store women shoppers jumped onto counters, several were knocked down and one fainted.

But Vecchione went into action. Diving under a counter he knocked over the cash register, crawled out, scooped up a handful of change, dived under another counter and dashed through a door—into the arms of Patrolman Charles O'Neil.

Three hours later, Vecchione was sentenced in Malden district court to three months in the House of Correction after he had pleaded guilty, before Judge Elbridge G. Davis, to larceny of $2.

FACTS

Washington, Dec. 12—The Department of Agriculture has completed a new report on the development of cotton in Brazil.

The report says that in 1932, before the United States adopted its program of restricting cotton planting, Brazil exported 2577 bales of cotton to the markets of the world.

In 1935, after three years of cotton restrictions in this country, the report says, Brazil will export 650,000 bales of cotton.

The United States in this year selling less American cotton to the world market than, with one exception, any year since the Civil War.

VAN SWERINGEN, RAIL CZAR, DIES

Cleveland, O., Dec. 12 (AP)—M. J. Van Sweringen, who with his brother, O. P., rose from obscure poverty to build a great rail empire, died in a hospital here today after several months' illness.

The first intimation that Mr. Van Sweringen was ill came during a hearing several weeks ago over reorganization of the Missouri Pacific, which is controlled by the Van Sweringen brothers.

O. P. Van Sweringen was at his brother's bedside when he died.

'ORIA GIVES UP VANDERBILT MILLIONS

F. Carew and to Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

"It gives Mrs. Vanderbilt her freedom from both.

"Justice Carew no longer holds the whip hand over her. Mrs. Whitney can no longer say that it is little Gloria's money and not the child herself that the mother is primarily interested in.

"When Carew made little Gloria's guardian, Thomas B. Gilchrist, a party to his custody order, it put control of the income in the jurist's hands. From then on, Mrs. Vanderbilt would do what he said—or else.

"Now she has shaken off the shackles and will be free to live her life as she sees fit."

The Journal said Mrs. Vanderbilt had told close friends:

"I will no longer live under the curse of the Vanderbilt money, for there is a curse on it. No Vanderbilt has ever had anything but unhappiness."

In the past year, Mrs. Vanderbilt has demonstrated she can earn her own living.

The fashionable dress shop, Sonia, Inc., which she has established with her sister, Thelma, Lady Furness, is prospering and its earnings are sufficient to sustain her.

Before the end of the week, if possible, Mrs. Vanderbilt will give up her big house here. She has found a small apartment near her mid-town shop and there she will make her home.

She will sell the furniture and other contents of the house at public auction. This furniture and the works of art, all extremely valuable, she bought with her own money after her husband, Reginald F. Vanderbilt, died.

Gloria's intention was confirmed by the American Art Galleries. They admitted today that one of their representatives was called to her home yesterday and discussed with her the supervision of the public auction.

Among the objects of art Mrs. Vanderbilt has decided to sell, it was learned, is a bust of her late husband sculptured by Jo Davidson. She is selling this because it was given to her in other days by Mrs. Whitney.

Concluding, the Journal said:

"On top of everything else, Gloria has been subjected to innumerable annoyances by Gilchrist. She has told friends that she was subjected to cross-examinations every time she sent a bill to his office to be paid.

"Out of the $50,000 a year for Gloria's support, all she got in cash was $600. That was allowed for her own personal use."

Girl Twins Share "Hics"

VIRGINIA RICCELLI
In Hospital With Hiccoughs

ROSE RICCELLI
Suffering From Hiccoughs at Home

Twins' 'Hics' Blamed On 'Reading'

Virginia Riccelli, 19, of Cedar street, Mattapan, got her hiccoughs from reading about another similarly afflicted, doctors at City Hospital said today.

Doctors explained that Virginia's hiccoughs came from mental suggestion.

Her hiccoughs are a form of hysteria. She read about another's suffering from hiccoughs and became subjected to them herself, they said.

The hysteria comes from a mental conflict. Although Virginia has not admitted to any worry, doctors are positive th atsomething is bothering her and as soon as the situation is righted, Virginia's hiccoughs will cease.

Despite the fact that doctors were positive that "something was bothering her" and despite the persistence of her hiccoughs, Virginia appeared very cheerful today.

She is the life of her ward and keeps the nurses and patients alike ni shouts of laughter.

"They're a nuisance all right. Just like reporters," she flashed when asked about her seizure which has been going on for 14 weeks.

Ruling by Green Reinstated Police

The individual ruling of the recently appointed Civil Service Commissioner Thomas H. Green reinstated the four Metropolitan District Commission police officers who were discharged in 1919 for refusal to do strike duty, it was learned today.

Associate Civil Service Commissioner Frank A. Bayrd of Malden today announced through John Gilbert, executive secretary, that neither he or his associate, George Harlow voted on the reinstatement.

Actress Suicide Probe Reopens

Los Angeles, Dec. 12 (AP)—Investigation of the reported suicide of Aleta Freiis Alexander, former New York stage actress, reopened today when Coroner Frank Nance summoned witnesses for an inquest.

The inquest was called at the request of the actress' father, Dr. William Freiis, New Jersey physician, who flew here. Ross Alexander, film actor and husband of the woman, had told authorities his wife had been despondent because of her failure to achieve screen success.

Worcester Blaze Laid to Firebug

Worcester, Dec. 12 (AP)—A three-way investigation was in progress today to determine whether an unknown incendiary was responsible for two early morning Water street fires, a two-alarm blaze which routed 3, persons and did damage estimated at more than $10,000.

The presence of kerosene and rubbish and the fact the flames originated in an unused section of the basement caused fire and police investigators to announce the midnight blaze at the Caplin clothing store, 116 Harding, was set.

FATHER SEIZES GIRL

Wins Court Battle for Custody

A dramatic scene was enacted in Suffolk County Courthouse and in the street today, when Solomon Baker, 33, of Norfolk street, Dorchester, forcibly took custody of his 5½-year-old daughter, Shirley.

Judge William F. Prest had just ordered the child returned to the father by the maternal grandmother, Mrs. Rose Goldman of Warren avenue, Malden.

The grandmother has cared for the little girl since the death of the mother, Mrs. Ida Baker, whose body was found floating in the ocean, October 5, near Hull.

Following the court's decision, the father went into the courthouse corridor and attempted to seize his daughter, who was with an aunt.

The child began to cry and scream.

Outside the building the father picked up Shirley and placed her in an automobile as she continued to scream.

Meanwhile, the grandmother and other relatives were in tears.

WPA Isn't Music, So He Gets Jail

Portland, Me., Dec. 12—Because he declined to accept a $18-a-week WPA job on the grounds it wasn't playing a clarinet in an orchestra, Samuel Nappi, 20, Monument street musician, received a 90-day sentence in jail today.

He was put on probation for a year on condition that he support his widowed mother and four brothers and sisters. Napi was charged with being idle and disorderly.

He told the court that while he lived in his mother's house he "had nothing to do with her" and was supported by his grandfather.

STATE JOBLESS WAR BREAKS ON 3 FRONTS

Trouble broke out on three fronts of the state employment situation today.

It was announced by Colonel Thomas F. Sullivan, Boston ERA-WPA administrator, that the city's remaining 2000 ERA workers would be laid off for an indefinite period at the close of work today because of failure of Washington to supply funds.

Meanwhile, State WPA Administrator Arthur G. Rotch declared that only 21,840 workers were now on Boston WPA rolls despite a quota of 27,000.

BLAST FROM CURLEY

On the heels of this confusion came a blast from Governor Curley on progress claimed by Rotch in state sidewalk WPA projects.

Basing his statement on a report submitted to him by Commissioner of Public Works William F. Callahan, Governor Curley declared:

"The statement of Administrator Rotch that his agency was proceeding with the development of the sidewalk construction program as rapidly as the various facilities were made available is small comfort to the thousands of unemployed throughout the state in view of the failure at present to complete any portion of the work.

"The statement by Mr. Rotch that 92 projects are in process of completion or have been started is not borne out by the facts as reported to Commissioner of Public Works William F. Callahan, who has submitted to me the complete check-up from his engineers in every section of the Commonwealth."

1621 MEN AT WORK

According to Callahan's report, signed by Joseph A. McCarty, senior civil engineer, only 1621 men are now at sidewalk construction work compared with the promise made by Rotch in September that 14,000 would have been employed by now.

The report further stated that of the $4,000,000 expected by Rotch only $1,300,000 has been forthcoming from Washington.

In addition, the report claimed that repeated offers of help from the Public Works department had been refused and that the greatest confusion existed in the management of the projects in regard to trucks and materials.

Curley Calls in All Secretariat Cards

Henceforth, the only one of the Governor's secretariat who will be entitled to carry and official card is Edmund Hoy, his private secretary.

The Governor's action was due, he said, to reports that unauthorized persons displaying cards issued by his secretaries were promising concessions and patronage in the name of the Governor.

Barker Takes Oath As Clerk of Court

Former Representative William H. Barker of East Boston was sworn in as clerk of the East Boston district court today by Judge Joseph H. Barnes. More than 300 friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony.

Assistant Clerk Augustis C. Loechi read the commission of the new clerk and the oath was then administered by the court. More than 100 floral tributes were sent from the courthouse to hospitals throughout the city.

Five Pairs of Eyes Keep Watch for Santa and His Reindeer

YVONNE ANNETTE CECILE EMILIE MARIE

(World copyright, 1935, by NEA Service, Inc., and Boston Evening American.)

As their second Christmas approaches, the Dionne quins seem to feel in the air the excitement of holiday preparations. They are still too young to understand much of what their nurses tell them about Santa Claus and his reindeer, but they know there is something of importance impending—and they don't intend those bright eyes of theirs will miss a single interesting happening. Here they are, peeking inquisitively through their nursery door. And old Santa, if he wants to catch them napping, will have to be an early riser. Left to right, the lineup is Yvonne, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie.

QUINS WAIT SANTA

May See Parents at Christmas

Callander, Ont., Dec. 12 (AP)—Wealthy movie actresses now, the Dionne quintuplets don't need presents this Christmas as they did last Yuletide but the gifts are expected to start rolling in soon.

So far there has been no shower of presents.

Dr. Allen Roy Dafoe, their physician, said today no presents had been received but Christmas is still two weeks away. Plans for the holiday at the hospital have not been made—the quins have been busy movie-making—but they are sure to include at least one Christmas tree and perhaps Dr. Dafoe will dress up like Santa Claus.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, the parents, probably will be invited to the hospital for Christmas dinner and it is likely they will take their five older children to see the quintuplets.

2 Hijack Suspects Seized; Crimes Laid to Gamblers

Arrest of two Greater Boston men and seizure of the truck said to have been involved in two Massachusetts hijackings yesterday indicated today that Boston's underworld had turned to this form of racket to reap profits expected from outlawed gambling machines.

The arrested men, driving a truck bearing registration plates identical, police said, with those reported on the truck driven by the Dighton hijackers, disclaimed knowledge of the robberies.

They said they had been hired in Boston to drive the truck to New York and deliver a load of what New London police revealed as Boston-banned "digger" machines.

The two were booked on charges of driving an improperly registered truck after investigation revealed the owner of of the machine had given a false address in New York.

The second hijacking, which occurred in North Attleboro with the victim being turned loose in Watertown late yesterday, was carried out in identical fashion, leading police to believe it the work of the same gang.

Circumstances surrounding the arrests in New London led police to believe the hijack gang was associated with the underworld powers which sought to control the operation of gambling machines in Boston before police banned them.

It was pointed out that the would-be operators had sustained a tremendous loss when police chased the machines from the city.

Yesterday's two robberies, in which merchandise and choice liquors valued at nearly $15,000 were stolen from two trucks, are believed to have been the first in a series of well-planned attacks on trucks loaded with valuable goods.

The seizure of the truck in New London was made after two state troopers trailed it from Groton, Ct.

Quakes Rough On Boston Gas Mains

Earthquakes are rough on gas mains, it was testified at today's hearing before the department of public utilities in the city's fight against the Boston Consolidated Gas Co.'s proposal to increase its rates.

Raymond L. Presbrey, superintendent of the company's Everett plant, first rebuttal witness, testified two of the company's gas mains have been cracked by earthquakes in 10 years.

In a quake that toppled considerable chainware off shelves and tossed a fed Bostonians out of bed, a gas main in Albany street, South End, near the City hospital, was cracked, it was learned from company officials.

Cross-examined by Lewis H. Weinstein, assistant corporation counsel, Presbrey's testimony was chiefly concerned with maintainance costs.

Griffin Funeral Rites Tomorrow

Solemn requiem mass will be celebrated tomorrow morning at nine o'clock in St. Angela's Church, Mattapan, for Robert F. Griffin, 37, who died at Carney Hospital from lobar pneumonia.

Mr. Griffin was the brother of Dr. William H. Griffin, past state commander of the American Legion.

He is survived by his widow and five children, and two brothers and two sisters. The funeral will be at Mt. Benedict Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Salvation Army Locates Heir

Through the efforts of Major George Johnson of the Boston Salvation Army Bureau, Edward C. Beasley, 75, formerly of Brookline, and now of Wilmington, Del., will receive $27 as his share in the estate of a relative in England.

Harriman to Meet Governor Landon

Topeka, Kas., Dec. 12 (AP)—Henry I. Harriman of Boston, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, has arranged to meet Governor Alf M. Landon, potential Republican presidential candidate, here tomorrow.

Stabbed on Street

Edward Homer, of Paine street, Mattapan, was in a serious condition today at City Hospital from stab wounds received from unknown assailants as he was walking to his home.

Man Arrested 27 Times, Sentenced

John Hayes, 46, of Columbus pre nue, Boston, whom police characterized as "one of America's most notorious pickpockets," with 27 arrests in Boston alone, was sentenced by Judge Ralph W. Rice in Lynn district court today to one year in jail.

Hayes appealed and was ordered held in Salem jail unless $300 cash bail is provided.

Drowned in Cistern

Bridgeport, Vt., Dec. 12 (AP)—The body of Martin Garvey, 72, who, police reported, had been in ill health for some time, was found today drowned in a cistern at his home.

THE SENATOR SAYS:

Mayor's Flat Feet Itching to Kick Up a Rumpus

THE SENATOR: !

He sees all and knows all that's going on in Massachusetts politics and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, often both. Best of all, he tells about it.

Meet him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

THE SENATOR

We do not say anything because you never know who is with The Senator, a visiting Congressman, a pickpocket looking for a buddy's bail or just another ERA case.

"What do you hear, Senator?" asks Timmy, as he refills the bar bottle of 50-year-old brandy.

"What I hear," says The Senator, "would make a good broadcast for Microphone Dick. I was going to have a brandy, but now I will have a Scotch and soda. Just one. I am practically on the wagon because my feet are troubling me."

Quick as a flash the little man behind The Senator yells:

"The same!"

"Right," says Timmy, setting one up for the little man with the whisker. "I hear," he goes on, "that Johnny Backus had a bad case of falling of the lower jaw when the Governor slipped Dick the uuilities job."

"There is no law against hearing such things," says The Senator. "There may be an epidemic of the disease when the Governor slips Johnny an associate commissionership on public works."

The Senator takes aim at a ceiling fly through the bottom of his glass. He sets his glass down gently and he says:

"Timmy, perhaps I will have another. Just one more. Did you ever have fallen arches?"

"Flat feet?" asks Timmy.

"Right," says Timmy, fixing two more. "Everybody behind the stick has flat feet."

The little man with the whisker reaches past The Senator and explores the cole slaw with a wedge of pickle. The Senator ignores him and lights a fresh cigar and they both sample their second drinks.

"Do you know why Freddie Mansfield was elected mayor?" demands The Senator, and before even the little man with the whisker could say anything, he is off:

"Freddie is mayor because Governor Jim, during the campaign, accused him of having flat feet. This, to my mind, was the major mistake of the Governor's career, because nobody should ever get Freddie angry, especially about his feet. Now, I do not know if Freddie has flat feet or not, but he does not like to have anybody, especially Governor Jim, come right out flat-footed and say they are flat.

"So Freddie's feet became the undercover campaign issue, Freddie's Spanish War service was dragged in and Freddie got so almighty worked up that he went out and won himself the election by the length of a little toe over Mal."

"And now," says The Senator, "I get a big laugh when I read that Freddie says he does not anticipate seeking the Democratic nomination for Governor next year, because Freddie is just marking time with those feet and is planning to plank them right into the fight when Governor Jim will be preferring almost anybody else, including Paddy the Peterman, as his running mate on the ticket.

"The Hurley boys will be hot after the endorsement at the June convention, and whichever fails to get the nod will emulate Governor Jim and carry his fight to the September primaries. And at this point Freddie will step into the picture on those feet of his and it is going to be very embarrassing for Governor Jim.

"Those rumors about Charlie Hurley getting a Washington appointment as assistant secretary of the treasury are nothing but early propaganda against him."

The Senator looks around at the little man with the whisker and The Senator looks at his own empty glass. He does not say anything this time. He just gives Timmy the high sign.

"That's Charlie Hurley, the state treasurer, ain't it?" Timmy asks.

"The same!" yells the little man.

"My good man," says The Senator, turning around, very exasperated, "I do not know you. You were behind me at Purcell's and again at the Parker House and now you are here. Always saying the same thing."

"I thought he was with you," says Timmy. "What's your idea?" he roars at the little man.

"My idea is this," says the little man with the whisker. "That Governor Jim should make a public retraction about Freddie's feet before Freddie works himself up to getting elected President."

The Senator laughs. The Senator can take a joke.

"Who are you, my good man?" asks The Senator.

"The same!" yells The Senator.

U. S. Tolerance Protecting Red Tyrants, Jesuit Says

Soviet Rules Spy Army Spread Over World

By ALAN C. FRAZER

Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American

Philadelphia, Dec. 12—The Communists are a disciplined army of tyrants marching boldly toward their despotic aims under the protection of America's traditional tolerance.

Every member of the Communist party in the United States is subservient to the will of his party chiefs, and they take their orders from the Soviet leaders in periodic congresses at Moscow.

The leaders at Moscow are teaching the technique of crushing all opposition to Communism in America and in every country in the world.

This description of the Communist organization for revolution was prepared by Rev. Timothy J. Coughlin, S. J. A. M., former professor at Fordham and instructor in the history of Communism at the St. Joseph's College public evening school of social sciences.

Father Coughlin wrote:

Like Huge Snake

"The purpose of the Communist International is best defined by its own statutes, as follows:

"'The organization of common action between the workers of various countries, who are striving toward the overthrow of capitalism; the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat and of the International Soviet republic.'

"By every agency within its power—the press, the lecture platform, the university chair, the theater, the cinema, the strike, the lockout and in a hundred other ways—it strives tirelessly and violently to move the cause of Communism forward.

"It is always alert and keen, awaiting the moment to strike, and when it does, to strike hard.

"Yet, in all its movements, there is a discipline that amounts to nothing less than tyranny. All members of the Communist party must be blindly obedient to the decisions of that party and must carry out its wishes, even at the risk of their lives.

Soviet Supreme

"In order to deceive, the International insists that its members belong to the organized groups in factory and workshop and mine, where they will carry out the orders of their superiors. Discussion of policy is free only until a decision has been reached. Once reached, all must obey or be expelled from the organization in disgrace.

"Who decides these policies? The world congress, which convenes on the soil of Soviet Russia. Every country sends delegates, but the whip is held by Soviet leaders.

"Zinoviev, one of the present Soviet leaders, says they 'hold such a position because of their special experience and peculiar prestige, which comes from successful accomplishment.'

"What sort of technique is it? Briefly, force and deception on every side; crushing all who do not see eye to eye with them; denying, never admitting; deception, marching along boldly under the protection of democratic rule and individual freedom.

"Our western world must realize that in fighting Communism it is not meeting scattered forces but a unified compact organization, which drills its leaders well in the gentle art of being thoroughly unscrupulous."

TWO TAXPAYER GROUPS SCORE RISE PLAN

Vigorous opposition to the report of the special legislative commission which recommended imposition of $17,000,000 additional state taxes in Massachusetts in 1936 was registered today at two important meetings.

One was held in Hotel Bancroft, Worcester, and the other at Boston City Club.

Sharply scoring the special recess committee on taxation for its recent report which would add 200,000 more low salaried persons in the state income tax group, the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers' Associations declared at its meeting in Worcester that it will firmly oppose all new taxes until the legislature takes definite steps to eliminate governmental waste, extravagance and inefficiency.

60,000 IN OPPOSITION

The opposition of the federation, whose members aggregate more than 60,000, was delegated to its legislative committee by the board of directors.

A resolution passed by the directors stated that imposition of new taxes at this time in the form proposed would merely provide more funds to be spent extravagantly by public agencies. It says:

"Whereas, the recent report of the special recess commission on taxation o fthe General Court recommends additional taxation of the people of Massachusetts to the extent of more than $17,000,000 annually, and,

"Whereas, the imposition of any such new taxes in the form proposed would neither relieve the present staggering burden upon real estate nor materially remedy existing inequities in the distribution of the tax load, but would merely provide more funds to be spent by extravagant public agencies.

"Be It Resolved: By the board of directors of the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Associations that the legislative committee be and hereby is authorized to oppose in the name of the Federation the imposition of any additional taxes until decisive steps are taken to eliminate waste, extravagance and inefficiency in our government."

S. H. THOMPSON PRESIDES

S. H. Thompson, president of the Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce, presided at a luncheon meeting of the organization at the Boston Ity Club, where the recess commission's report was discussed in detail.

Thompson introduced Attorney Philip Nichols of Boston, nationally known tax expert, who in turn presented the three principal speakers.

They were Senator William A. Davenport of Greenfield, chairman of the legislative recess commission, who spoke on "Reducing and Equalizing Taxes"; Representative Albert F. Bigelow of Brookline, chairman of the House ways and means committee of the Legislature, who addressed the gathering on "State Finances of 1935 and 1936," and Rodney W. Loeg, president of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, who talked on "Real Estate and the Present Tax Situation."

Limit on Real Estate Tax Too Summarily Rejected

Attorney Philip Nichols, nationally known tax expert and chairman of the taxation committee of Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce, today concludes his analysis for the Boston Evening American of the report of the special legislative commission which recommends $17,000,000 additional in state taxes.

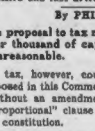
His third and last article follows:

By PHILIP NICHOLS

The proposal to tax non-income producing securities at $2 per thousand of capital value, as is done in Ohio, is not unreasonable.

Such a tax, however, could not be imposed in this Commonwealth without an amendment to the "proportional" clause in the state constitution.

The proposal to redefine "inhabitant" to really a proposal to tax every non-resident spending six months in the Commonwealth in any one year and not moving constantly from place to place. Such a person might also be taxed in the state of his real domicile, and there might be serious constitutional objections to taxing him here also, especially with respect to income not arising from properly located or services performed in this Commonwealth.



Philip Nichols

The practical objections to such a tax in a commonwealth which seeks to attract non-residents for purposes of study or recreation to its universities and its vacation resorts are also obvious.

The proposal to give serious thought to curtailing the growing increase in tax-exempt property is a sound one.

Cut Exemptions

The Massachusetts income tax on interest and dividends was originally intended to reach by means of a tax on income only such property as was not already subject to a tax on capital value. Since stock in domestic corporations was taxed on its capital value (the tax as a matter of convenience being collected from the corporation) the tax credits cannot be granted on the income from the stock was not also taxed, just as the income from real estate was not taxed.

The present temporary law under which the income earned by domestic corporations is taxed twice, once when received by the corporation and again when distributed to the stockholder, constitutes a discrimination against those who invest in local industry which is, it is believed, unique in American jurisprudence. The only justification for such a tax is the present fiscal situation.

There is doubtless merit in the suggestion that, as a matter of permanent policy, part of the revenue from motor vehicles should be distributed to the cities and towns. One of the anomalies resulting from the present method by which the admittedly meritorious gasoline tax are expended by the state is that the worst roads are usually in the localities where good roads are needed most—that is, within the limits of cities and populous towns.

End State Tax

The proposal to abolish the so-called "state tax" has much to commend it. The state fiscal system must, however, contain some elastic element, to cover the differences between the total appropriations of each session of the legislature and the fixed revenues, and if the state tax were abolished, the ingenuity of the legislature in balancing the budget would be invoked every year.

The present state tax, with its varying and highly painful burden on the cities and towns has some merit as a deterrent to extravagant expenditures by the legislature.

The proposal to impose a tax limit on real estate is too summarily rejected by the commission. It is true that statutes and constitutional amendments which have imposed an arbitrary and drastic tax limit on real estate without making provision to replace from other sources the revenue so lost have brought about nothing but trouble and disaster; but it is equally true that plans to reduce real estate taxation by tapping other sources of revenue have invariably failed of their object; the real estate taxes have not been lowered and the new taxes have simply constituted an additional burden on the taxpayer.

The imposition of a tax limit on real estate should be a condition precedent to the levy of any new or additional taxes on other subjects; and, conversely, there should be no tax limit on real estate unless adequate provision for other revenues is made in order to meet the requirements of the public debt and essential public service.

Further, it is not improbable that a definite tax limit imposed by the decision and rulings of some public board at the instance of aggrieved taxpayers is a better approach to the subject than a fixed tax limit established by law, and applicable on the same basis to all the cities and towns of the state or to the changing conditions of economic welfare.

It is believed that the expected revenues from the proposals of the commission has been estimated with too great optimism. Certainly the exemption of machinery, while defensible on economic grounds, would result in a great loss in revenue, and it is doubtful whether the proposed change in the method of taxing merchandise of corporations would result in any additional revenue from that source; much less so much additional revenue as to wipe out the loss on machinery and add $2,000,000 more in taxes besides.

As to the first supplementary statement, there is a strong theoretical argument that could be made in favor of increasing the income tax on dividends and interest to 8 per cent or even 10 per cent. The average tax rate on real estate has nearly doubled since 1916, when the income tax rate of 6 per cent was established. Nevertheless, there are serious doubts as to the advisability of such a change. Intangible wealth tends to flow out of a state when the tax is too high.

We now have the most effective system of taxing intangibles in use in the United States, and it would be dangerous to meddle with it without being sure that the proposed change would not reduce instead of increase the total revenue from intangibles, or would not even wreck the whole intangible tax system.

Unsound Theory

The second supplementary statement not only disregards the teachings of experience but is based upon an unsound economic theory. The history of every state in the union, including Massachusetts prior to 1916, demonstrates that securities and credits cannot be taxed at the same rate as real estate, and the states that still attempt to impose such a tax are the ones which now get the least revenue from these sources.

Moreover, securities and credits ought not to be taxed at the same rate as real estate. All of the real wealth of this country consists of land, buildings, gold and silver currency and tangible personal property and some such really intangible assets as good-will, patent rights and franchises. Most of this property is represented by some paper writing evidencing ownership such as a deed, a bill of sale, or letters patent.

No one would think of taxing a piece of land worth $5000 at $5000 and also taxing the deed to the land at $5000, or taxing both an automobile and the bill of sale which evidenced ownership of the automobile. Some pieces of property, such as large manufacturing establishments, a group of stores or a fleet of ships are owned by many persons, and the paper writing evidencing the ownership of each of these persons of an undivided interest in the property is called a stock certificate, and a claim against the property is called a bond or note.

It is just as unfair to tax both the property of the corporation and the stock certificates which represent ownership in the property as it would be to tax both the land and the deed. A moderate tax to compensate the public for the convenience to the owner of having his undivided interest in the property represented by a paper writing which the law recognizes and protects as an assignable symbol of ownership is all that the public is entitled to, and experience has shown that such a tax, of about one-tenth of the tax on the property represented by the evidence, is all that can be collected from the owners of such paper writings. A higher tax cannot be enforced, because public sentiment will not support it.

The report as a whole indicates a serious and conscientious attempt to deal with a difficult if not insoluble problem. Some of the suggestions required real courage to make. The real weakness of the report is the parochial point of view—the neglect to take adequate advantage of the experiences, the success and the failures of the 47 other states that have been struggling with the same problem, or even of the financial history of our own state.

Although the depression has involved us in many additional expenses that cannot be avoided it would be better to try to live within our existing means than to seek additional revenues, especially when it is apparent from the report that additional revenues cannot be secured without placing a real burden upon people who can ill afford to bear it.

Crossing Tender a Maine Mayor

Auburn, Me., Dec. 12 (AP)—Ernest E. Estes was pleased today by his election to Auburn's mayoralty, but he planned to continue his job as a $18-a-week railroad crossing tender just the same.

"For a mayor's salary of $450, it isn't worth sacrificing a lifetime job," he said after the returns from yesterday's non-partisan city election gave him victory by 61 votes over his boyhood friend, Mayor George C. Wing, Jr.

Guittar, Police Veteran, Is Dead

Patrolman Charles E. Guittar, 50, veteran member of the Boston police department, died today at his home on Seymour street, West Roxbury. He had been ill with pneumonia for a week.

CHIROPODISTS HIT LAX LAW ON 'QUACKS'

Massachusetts, notwithstanding a national reputation for culture and education, furnished a happy hunting ground for all manner of medicinal fakirs, quacks and illegal practitioners,

Women patients and poor, BIRE dents of pseudo "schools" are chief victims, it was charged today.

Dr. Joseph Lelyveld, secretary of the council of education of the National Association of Chiropody, is authrity for the statement.

HIT BY BOWERS

As disclosed in the Boston Evening American yesterday, Dr. Bowers, a Clinton physician, charges in a forthcoming article that thousands of dollars are being muicted from Massachusetts sick and ailing by medical quacks.

More than 1000 allegedly illegal practitioners are operating without restraint in the Commonwealth.

The National Association of Chiropody, with a large membership in Massachusetts, has been seeking to compel the annual re-registration of physicians, persons purporting to conduct "health clinics," osteopaths, chiropractors and pseudo "podiatrists."

"The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is the loosest in the entire country so far as the regulation or supervision of so-called schools for the training of podiatricians is concerned," Dr. Lelyveld declared.

"New York, Pennsylvania and other neighboring states have requirements much more exacting than Massachusetts, in spite of the fact that the Commonwealth leads the country in culture and education.

"Our organization has been cooperating with the state bureau of registration in medicine in tracing some of the evils."

BILL SOUGHT

The move to drive out the quacks and fake medical or quasi-medical schools is expected to take the form of a bill at the next session of the Legislature to require every person practicing any branch of medicine or the alleviative arts to register annually.

In this connection Dr. Lelyveld made the flat charge that "thousands of dollars have been spent in lobbying at recent sessions of the Legislature to prevent enactment of legislation" placing all schools under the supervision of the state board.

So far as the supervision of spurious schools purporting to teach anything and everything from chiropody to chiropractice, optometry to embalming, existing laws are without force or effect.

Youth Prey to Red Teachings

Five million American boys and girls, unable to afford a college education, are easy prey today to anti-social and revolutionary teachings.

How "public service universities" are grappling with this crying problem was outlined in a brochure sent to 1500 leading citizens of Boston today — "Youth's Challenge to Democracy" issued by Northeastern University.

Realizing that these "under-privileged youths" must be educated for the safety of the state, these public service universities are providing a practical education at low cost.

Their aim is not to produce scholars but leaders, trained in the practical affairs of commerce, industry, the professions and government.

Six Austrian Boys Seized for Treason

Leoben, Austria, Dec. 12 (AP)—Six high school boys were arrested today on charges of high treason and 30 more were expelled from school and interned in a concentration camp at Messendorf as Nazi sympathizers.

The action was believed to be an overture to Vice-Chancellor Von Starhemberg's recent order for a thorough patriotic house cleaning throughout Austria.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief Of Pain.

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may start flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may be flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS—which have been used successfully for over 40 years by millions of people. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS.

Rosamond Musgrave to Wed At Naval Ceremony

By BETTY ALDEN

MONTH AFTER MONTH we attend, and write about all manner of interesting and beautiful weddings, but in most every case it is the floral decorations and the costumes of the bride and her attendants which add color to the pageant . . . We seldom have occasion to mention what the bridegroom and his best man wear and, if we did, we could only say "Mr. so and so wore the customary black and white ensemble."

OLIVIA STONE

But at Rosamond Musgrave's wedding this evening, the gentlemen in the party will contribute their share of dash and color to the occasion, as Rosamond's bridegroom, John Rensselaer Van Nagell, is a lieutenant in the United States Navy and he and his brother officers, who will attend him, will be attired in the flashing blue and gold of the Navy's full dress . . .

The wedding is taking place at twilight this evening in the Marlborough street home of the bride's aunts, the Misses Hortense I. and Rosamond Porter, and is to be attended only by members of the two families and a few intimate friends . . .

Mr. Malcolm Lang will play the wedding march and nuptial music throughout the ceremony . . . Percy Musgrave, of Stockbridge, will give his sister away and Rev. Daniel Bliss will officiate . . .

The bride is wearing her great-grandmother's lace shawl fashioned into a veil and fastened to her coiffure with its original orange blossoms . . . Her gown is of ivory satin with dolman sleeves and square neck, and she will carry a bouquet of white roses and gardenias . . .

Mrs. Ernest Blaney Dane, Jr. (Barbara Welch), of Brookline, and Miss Elsie Brewer of Marlborough street, matron and maid of honor, have taken a tip from the navy's blue and gold in choosing their costumes of sapphire blue velvet with matching hats and arm bouquets of yellow roses . . .

Lieutenant George A. Lashry, Jr., aide to Rear-Admiral Walter R. Gherardi, is to be the best man, and the ushers will be Lieutenant John L. Chew and Lieutenant William Y. Allen, U. S. N. . . .

The bride, who is a graduate of the Winsor School and a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club, and her mother, Mrs. Percy Musgrave (Edith Porter), have been making their home with the Misses Porter . . . Mrs. Musgrave, gowned in lavender crepe, will receive the wedding guests, and her sister, Miss Rosamond, will wear blue lace, and Miss Hortense black velvet . . .

Lieutenant Van Nagell, son of Mrs. John Rensselaer Van Nagell of San Diego, California, is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy with the class of 1925, and is stationed on the U. S. S. McDonough, now in the Boston Navy Yard . . .

He and his bride are to have a month's honeymoon in Nassau (contrary to our first impression that he had to sail for the Pacific Coast on December 16) before rejoining the U. S. McDonough, which sails on January 16 for the West Coast . . .

The bride's sister is Mrs. John Gardiner Flint (Eleanor Musgrave) of Chestnut Hill, and her brother, Percy Musgrave, who married the former Marguerite Swann, now resides in Stockbridge . . .

Mrs. Harold G. Cutler Entertains

BESIDES SEVERAL OTHER social attractions yesterday afternoon, two particularly outstanding events occupied our attention . . . One was the informal luncheon at which Mrs. Harold G. Cutler entertained her fellow members of the Literary Mornings Committee, and the other was the tea and lecture in Margaret Fitzhugh Browne's studio in the Fenway . . .

Mrs. Cutler's guests enjoyed their luncheon in small friendly groups at little tables placed about the music room and library of her delightful old home on Beacon street . . . and after luncheon each one took part in the discussion of last-minute plans for the first lecture in this winter's series under the guidance of Miss Emma Mills, which takes place next Monday.

Mrs. H. Parker Whittington and Mrs. Cutler, chairman and co-chairman of the committee, are justifiably proud of the outstanding group of novelists, poets and biographers whom Miss Mills has engaged to speak at the Mornings, and especially of the program for next Monday which includes addresses by Robert Tristram Coffin, Georges Duplaix and S. Foster Damon . . .

Among the guests were Mrs. Roger Cutler, Mrs. Charles Collens, Mrs. Harry T. Hayward, Mrs. James Mott Hallowell, Mrs. Horace S. Fraser, Mrs. John Gorham Palfrey and her daughter, Mrs. Marshall Fabyan, Jr., who is in charge of the ushers for the Literary Mornings, and Miss Olivia Stone, whose duty it is to round up a group of girls to serve bouillon before the lectures begin . . .

Novel Program

THE PROGRAM at Miss Browne's studio was reversed from the ordinary procedure at afternoon affairs . . . tea was served at 4 o'clock and after everyone had become acquainted and enjoyed the warm, welcoming hospitality of the hostess and the committee of alumnae of the Cambridge School of Architecture and Landscape Architecture, which sponsored the gathering, they listened to a fascinating address by Mr. William Edmond Lescaze, a prominent New York architect . . .

Mrs. George Lyman, Jr., and Mrs. George Higginson greeted each guest . . . among whom were Miss Alice Jenckes in a deep rust suit, with Miss Martha Houser; Mrs. William Walker Wheeler with her daughter, Adeline; Mrs. Chilton Cabot, Mrs. John S. Ames, Mrs. Robert W. Atkinson, Miss Jean Sargent in brown with a brown velvet drum major hat.

Dispensary's Open House

The guests who arrive at the open house at the Boston Dispensary tomorrow morning will be greeted by Mrs. James M. Pardee and Dr. A. Warren Stearns, dean of the Tufts Medical School and will each be given a small box of pills.

In the box will be capsules containing bits of printed information telling where and how one can best see the work of the Dispensary and the Boston Floating Hospital.

The Dispensary and Hospital are two of the many charities to be benefited by the Community Federation, which is conducting open house days this week as a part of the "Come and See—Go and Tell" campaign of the Women's Crusade.

Rummage Sale

Sacred Heart Day School Alumnae Plans Benefit

By MARGUERITE DOWNEY

ANY Rags! Any Rags! Kindly send them to Mrs. Emlyn Mitchell of Newton and Mrs. Gerald Connelly of Brookline, who are selling them at the rummage sale of the Sacred Heart Country Day School alumnae, Saturday, in Waltham.

In reality rags will not be sold and a rumor is already rife that one could pick up some quite "deevine" things at the sale . . . including an evening creation in ice blue satin, which has been donated by a leading Boston shop.

No. 208 Moody street, Waltham will be the scene of the bargain scramble which opens at 10 in the morning. Collecting clothes, and ticketing them for the benefit affair are Alice Falvey, Mrs. Edward Blake, Mrs. James Walsh, Alice Hatch, Marjorie Callahan and Alice Hallinan.

A group of younger graduates of the academy will do sales duty for the day . . . Alice Hurley, Marjorie Walsh, Ellen Bottomley and Catherine McLaughlin.

Also luring shoppers to make purchases will be Virginia Owen, Eileen Sheehan, Frances Shea, Miriam and Helen Clark and Anne and Cappy Ryan.

Guild of St. Elizabeth has a two-fold purpose in its movie party, Saturday morning. Its guests for the day will be hundreds of orphans and it lends a hand to the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund which is sponsoring the morning movie at Loew's State Theater.

Groups of children from the Home for Destitute Catholic Children, Working Boy's Home and the House of the Angel Guardian are looking forward with keen anticipation to the happy event, when each guest will be presented with a gift.

A year in California lies in wait for Clarice McMullen of Cambridge, who left recently for the Pacific coast. Miss McMullen, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. McMullen, is a member of the Ace of Clubs.

Phi Chi Kappa Dance a Success

Santa Claus arrived at the Phi Chi Kappa dance last night at the Hotel Continental, and brought noisemakers, serpentinas and whistles in his pack.

Marie Barry directed the girls' committee for the affair, which benefitted St. Vincent de Paul's Society of St. Peter's Church in Cambridge. Marie chose a black frock, threaded in gold, and a corsage of deep red roses for her dance ensemble. Peggy Buckley, a committee aid, was attractive in white krinkled crepe, edged with kolinsky, and Catharine Collins wore a silver cloth tunic with her black costume.

Also serving on the patron list were Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hurley, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Good, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. M. Ford, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Grozier, Dr. and Mrs. Leo T. Miles, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Wadden, Dr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Fleming and Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Barry.

The Untold Story:

Hauptmann Trial Strangest Ever

THRILL-SEEKING THOUSANDS JAMMED FLEMINGTON

In the fifth and last article of his series on the Hauptmann case, appearing in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Evening American, Lou Wedemar graphically describes the unusual trend of Hauptmann's trial, on which Hauptmann's appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court, denied this week, was largely based.

By LOU WEDEMAR

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service, the Boston Sunday Advertiser and the Boston Evening American. Republication in whole or in part strictly forbidden by the Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Evening American.)

When Bruno Richard Hauptmann entered the little New Jersey courthouse last winter to go on trial for the murder of the Lindbergh baby, Flemington was a frenzied boom-town, full of thrill-seeking visitors. The abnormal conditions under which the trial was held are summed up by stating that tickets of admission were sold, as if to a theater, and nearly 1000 spectators crowded into space built for 200.

Debutantes, politicians, farmers, housewives and collegians fought for seats with professors, actresses, newspapermen, criminologists, policemen and shopkeepers; and this helped make the proceedings the strangest in judicial history.

In Bedlam

Before the jury rendered its verdict of guilty, six weeks later, the spectators had more than once interrupted the proceedings. Witnesses and attorneys had been bombarded by laughter, hoots and applause; the prisoner had been jeered and threatened; motion picture cameras had recorded the sessions; defense attorneys had openly disagreed and had come near to a fist fight; two stenographers had been pushed through a window; a witness had fainted because of the crush, and a bonfire had been started by a jokester on the courtroom floor near the jury box.

"This man confessed the crime to me!" precipitating a near-riot at one session.

And an eccentric author, shouting at the top of his voice, had halted another session by demanding a front-row seat at once.

The jury passed, day after day on its trip across Main street to the Union Hotel, through crowds of fanatical hangers-on, who yelled:

"Burn Bruno!" "Send him to the chair!" "Give him the works!" as well as "He's innocent!"

Lindbergh's Word

From the hotel balcony the jury watched Mrs. Hauptmann carry Hauptmann's son, Manfred, to the prison door, after the infant had been barred from the court.

In this setting, drama was packed upon drama as overwhelming evidence was introduced against Hauptmann. Colonel Lindbergh identified the voice he heard calling "Hey, doctor!" when the $50,000 ransom was paid more than two years earlier. He said:

"It was Hauptmann's voice."

Mrs. Lindbergh, calmly fingering the clothes taken from her murdered first-born, described him:

"His hair*"

"It was golden."

"His eyes*"

"They were blue."

Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon, identifying the man to whom he paid the ransom

"That man was Bruno Richard Hauptmann!"

Bruno's Denial

Against these reputable witnesses, Hauptmann had only two of value—himself, with a prison record in Germany, and his wife. In his weird, croaking voice, Hauptmann denied—as he consistently has—any knowledge of the crime. Like a man in a daze, or under hypnosis, he made contradictory explanations of his sudden wealth.

His wife gave uncertainly his alibi for the kidnap night—that he was home in bed.

The state was unable to present any witness who had seen him in New Jersey the night of the kidnaping.

But without this link Hauptmann's connection with the crime was established so obviously, early in the trial, that virtually all of fifty supposedly unprejudiced newspapermen, polled foreshadowed the jury's verdict by voting "guilty."

There was presented an amazing mass of physical evidence—the $14,000 ransom money, taken from his home and garage; the testimony of handwriting experts, with a parade of huge charts showing the unique "X" of the ransom note, the wood experts, matching a piece of the ladder to a board from Hauptmann's attic; a board from his home bearing Dr. "Jafsie" Condon's Bronx telephone number, written in pencil.

The Ladder

While the defense called attention to the contradiction that 500 fingerprints had been found on the ladder, none Hauptmann's, and that not one fingerprint, even of the Lindberghs or their servants, had been found in the nursery, the jury was more interested in the ladder.

Even when a tall, solid ladder was set up beside the fragile kidnap ladder, and it was explained this had been in the Lindbergh garage, easy of access for a kidnaper, the evidence against Hauptmann remained too substantial for the jury to doubt.

The state's case was that Hauptmann committed the crime alone. And accountants proved to the jury's satisfaction that Hauptmann was just $50,000 richer after the kidnaping.

Justice Trenchard outlined the law and commented on the evidence. The jury retired, to consider what was probably one of the most complete evidential cases ever presented against a murderer in America.

Ten hours later it found the German guilty.

Guardian Sought for Boy Heir

PETER SALM

New York Dec 12 (INS) Acting upon an application filed by Count Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraten the supreme court, sitting today will name a guardian for the count's 11-year-old son, Peter Salm.

Count Salm asserted the application was made because he anticipated a fierce fight over the will of the late H. H. Rogers father of Peter, a mother, Mrs. Cecil Rogers Salm Ramey, which left the youngster $100,000 in cash and a one-third interest in his vast estate.

To his own son, Henry Huddleston Rogers, Jr. the elder Rogers bequeathed only a $500,000 trust fund. Rogers, Jr., according to Count Salm, is likely to contest the will, making appointment of a guardian for Peter highly desirable.

SOVIET PACT HIT BY SEN. LEWIS

New York Dec 12 (AP) Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, who was stricken with pneumonia in Moscow, returned today on the United States liner Washington, convinced this nation should have "voted its time" in recognizing the Soviet Union.

The senator was opposed to the recognition of the U. S. S. R. and shortly before he left for Europe several months ago and recognition should be withdrawn if the State Department found proof of allegations that Russia had violated its pledge of "hands off" in American internal affairs.

Lewis was asked if he had changed his attitude as a result of his visit to Russia.

"I am still of the opinion," he replied, "we should have hided our time in recognising Russia and let Russia prove herself before granting recognition".

Stroll on Campus Lands Man in Toils

One Wellesley citizen will confine his early morning walks to his own backyard in the future after an experience he had early today with the campus police at Wellesley College.

Troubled with insomnia, he took a turn around the campus walk and when about to march away from the grounds was hailed by the campus police.

His reasons for being on the campus grounds "beautiful moonlight night, insomnia and just felt like it"—were too much for the college police.

Cape Inhabitants Guard Attractions

Loss of the old West Yarmouth windmill has provided a call to arms for the inhabitants of Cape Cod to take action for the preservation of the remaining beauty of the Cape.

The first steps will be taken in a mass meeting to be held in the high school auditorium of South Yarmouth, December 20.

Headlight War Opens

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin today launched a drive against automobiles with one headlight. In the future, he said, motorists caught twice with only one light will face suspension of their registration.

EXPERTS ARGUE GAS PRICES

Gas company experts today were scheduled to open their case in their petition for an increase in rates before the Public Utilities Commission in the Public Works Building, Nashua street.

For the past three days opponents of the petition have presented testimony which was climaxed yesterday with the assertion of Dr. John Bauer of New York, representing the city of Boston that the company could give consumers a 50 cents per month reduction and still profit.

Other experts testified that the company charged its customers rates based on valuations much higher than its property was worth.

HCH-HIKING AT SEA

Fisherman Finds Going Is Tough

Cuttyhunk Dec. 12 (AP)—The going is tough for deep-sea hitch-hikers, as it is for their brethrenare.

Ralph Waldron, 40-year-old unemployed fisherman, says so. And he should know—he's "thumbing" his way on the ocean in an 18-foot dory from Bayway, N. J., to his home at Round Pond, Me.

He's a mere rowing than towing, days, but plugs on in hope of ne luck.

His ne stop was Hen and Chickens ghtship. He had to row the lmiles and had earned a night's sting by the time he reached hvessel.

Cuttyhunk was his destination yesterday. Caught in a tide rip after leaving the lightship, he was being carried to sea faster than he could row toward Cuttyhunk when the coast guard patrol boat 248 picked him up. He got a tow to his destination.

Courtesy Costs

Bingham, Utah, Dec. 13 (AP)—Cesare Robbiano, a courteous gentleman, stepped from a narrow sidewalk into the street to allow two women to pass. An automobile knocked him down, fracturing his skull.

GUNMEN SLAY "SUGAR KING"

Paterson, N. J., Dec 12 (AP)—A gangland slaying of Sammy Mandel, known to police as the "Sugar King," sent officers on a wide manhunt today, aided by clues provided by a semi-hysterical woman.

Mandel was found dying late last night on a sidewalk outside the woman's apartment by neighbors, who heard two shots and her screams for help. They saw two men disappear in an automobile.

The woman, booked as a material witness under the name of Anna Caille, alias Kelly, was standing beside Mandel's prostrate form.

Long Time

Chicago, Dec. 13 (AP)—A hundred and eight years old somersaw—Friday, the 13th!

It was not how she happened to live so long that puzzled Mrs. Martha Steiger today, but why?

"Undoubtedly," she is wont to tell her family of three daughters, 12 grandchildren, 30 great grandchildren and six great great grandchildren, "it's for some very good reason—perhaps I don't quite understand it.

"But I know there is something in this pattern of life I have to get done—even though it seems to be taking a long, long time."

HOLLAND HARVARD Club's New Play Reveals Talent

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Not since the spring of 1917 had the Harvard Dramatic Club produced a play by an undergraduate until last night when "Pudding Full of Plums," by Edward Eager, was enacted at Brattle Hall.

If there are a few more writers for the stage, with Mr. Eager's talent, at large around the Harvard yard, the hard - working members of H-D might find more profit on their own campus than by going to the French of Jean Cocteau or the English of A. A. Milne, as they did last year, for material.

George Holland

"Pudding Full of Plums' is by no means a play that is sturdy enough to cope with the current Broadway competition. It talks too much, and does too little; it is slightly adolescent in viewpoint, and extremely unimportant throughout its story of the poutings of two young things married just a year.

But—and I hope Mr. Eager declines to hate me for this pompous verdict—the author is a "promising playwright." He has the knack of making a scene move, however trifling its import. He is not yet the biographer of Charming People, the talent that his predecessor, Phillip Jerome Quinn Barry, developed so neatly in the Harvard atmosphere, but he can place words, phrases and pronouncements into the mouths of his actors and make them sound like life.

I liked some of Mr. Eager's mechanics in getting his cast on and off the stage. I liked, from him a bit, although marvelling at his brashness, when he cluttered up a stage with eight or ten characters and moved his action and his speeches from one group to another. This has not been done successfully in our recent theater.

* * *

Thet good young actress, Lois Hall, is perhaps the best amateur actress in this section. One cannot be sure that she is not ready to tour the New York casting offices. In "Pudding Full of Plums" Miss Hall is the bride of a year, bound to her friends by habit, grieved by her husband's failure to accept these friends for what she thinks they are worth.

There comes what is called a rift. The marriage seems doomed at the very moment when the young bride should be knitting tiny sweaters and what-not's. The solution happens off-stage, after the final curtain, and Mr. Eager leaves his auditors a bit perplexed about the young couple's future.

* * *

Mr Eager has imagined (or has he only imagined them?) a group of the nastiest young smart aleck, whose Bible is a "smart" magazine and "patron saint" is Dorothy Parker" These are the members of the young wife's "set." Your reviewer was ready to see them throttled by the "pompous" young husband. John Barnard was the husband, and he was good. The regular leading man was hospitalized last week for an appendectomy, I learn, and Mr. Barnard, with the old school spirit, filled in (certain).

Radio, Stage Favorites Share Film Honors

Co-starred with Pat O'Brien, two famous favorites of the radio and stage, James Melton and Jane Froman, appear together for the first time in Warner Brothers' "Stars Over Broadway," which opens at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow.

A lavish musical comedy, featuring Al Norman, and titled "One Hour With You," is the stage attraction for the coming week.

"Stars Over Broadway" is a musical film patterned to the measure of Mr. Melton and Miss Froman, with a score by Harry Warren and Al Dubin Although the featured players have won fame through their voices, a great deal of attention has been paid to the dancing in "Stars Over Broadway" with two of Hollywood's foremost dance masters, Bobby Connolly and Busby Berkeley, collaborating on the routines.

Norman

Supporting Messrs O'Brien and Melton and Miss Froman are Jean Muir and Frank McHugh.

* * *

"One Hour With You" is heralded as one of the biggest musical shows ever brought to the Metropolitan. Featured with Mr. Norman are Joaquin Garay, Prosper and Maret, the Libonati Trio and Marjorie Clay

Fabien Sevitsky's overture number will present the victors in the conductor's voice and piano contests.

Igor Gorin in 'As Thousands Cheer' Film Cast

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 12—Igor Gorin, whose baritone voice on the "Hollywood Hotel" program, has won him thousands of fans all over the country, has been chosen for one of the principal roles in "As Thousands Cheer" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Furthermore, Igor this week received two telegrams inviting him to sing at the Metropolitan Opera House. It's his lucky week.

"As Thousands Cheer" will have an all-star cast and particularly interesting is the word that Cole Porter [illegible] reaches here December 20 to write an entirely new score. The revue which is by Irving Berlin and Moss Hart was one of the hit plays of a few seasons ago with Marilyn Miller and Clifton Webb as principals. I look to see Clifton Webb in the role he created on the stage.

Louella O. Parsons

The very first print of the movies shot of the quintuplets in Ontario, Canada, was viewed by Darryl Zanuck. He couldn't have been more enthusiastic or more delighted with the babies who look as much alike as five little peas in a pod but who are entirely different in personality and manner of reacting to the camera.

Each child, Darryl found, smiles, cries, plays and eats in her own individual way. Never in the history of motion pictures has any film excursion had such wide publicity as this pilgrimage to Canada to film the world's most famous babies.

* * *

Seems to me Pan Berman is doing an awful lot of signing and buying of plays in New York. With a long list of successful pictures to his credit at Radio last year it's fitting that he should be turned loose on Broadway and allowed to do as he pleases. His every hand word that Patricia Wilder, a southern girl from Memphis, well known in New York as Broadway's "Honey Chile," will come out here to appear in a picture. He describes her as petite, cute, a singer and comedienne and he believes one of these days she will be a star.

* * *

The house formerly occupied by Alice Faye and her family (next door to this writer) has a new tenant and a very interesting one, Frederick Hazlitt Brennan, famous writer of short stories, and his family have moved in and will probably be there for some time. Mr. Brennan has come out to write the scenario for "Poppe," W. C. Fields' next picture, adapted from "Sally of the Circus." And, judging from the way these authors remain, he will probably be here indefinitely.

Snapshots of Hollywood

BILLIE BURKE and her daughter, PATRICIA, leaving for New York to attend the marriage of MRS. MARJORIE HUTTON, socialite, to JOSEPH DAVIES, prominent in Washington; BILLIE will also attend the opening of the "Follies" in Boston; UNA MERKEL and her mother taking off for the East to visit relatives and spend Christmas; SHIRLEY TEMPLE the first star in a long time to have a theater named for her; she has been notified of the new Shirley Temple playhouse in North Carolina.

FRANK CAPRA defies superstition by starting "Opera Hat" Friday, the thirteenth; GARY COOPER with two days' rest goes into the CAPRA picture. ARTHUR STEBBINS and ANNE DARLING take the big step. RABBI MAGNIN performs the ceremony in his study. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

At the Gayety

CHAPTER 33

One day, returning exhausted from her meager shopping, she threw herself on her bed. Jimmy poked his head from the door of her closet. His eyes were big with apprehension.

"Is he home, Nell? He's going to kill me this time, sure!"

Thought I ought to help out, Nell, and gee, I earned 30 cents. There it is."

He'd gone down to Columbus Circle. Standing in front of Child's when Henry Mason and the pretty yellow-haired girl passed.

"He saw me. I didn't think he'd get mad, I just kinda giggled and said, 'Gee, hello, Dad!' Gosh, he was wild! He gimme a terrible look and turned his back in a hurry without answering."

"Mind your own business, you —" and the man surveying Nell a figure inquiringly. "No child of mine will act in hoots on the street!"

She regarded him with silent accusation, wondering where this affair of his might end. He didn't want the girl to know he was married and a father? Was this the reason for his fury to the child?

After dinner Nell went to him with icy quiet.

Whether Jimmy shines shoes on the street or not Dad, someone has got to bring money into this house."

Don't I know that! With you adding another mouth to be fed, do you suppose I'm not aware of it up to me?"

Her eyes shot sparks of rage. "You're not feeding my child, Henry Mason! This baby's father sends money. I've taken it to buy food and pay rent for you and yours."

To Nell's amazement, he became amiable, almost apologetic. "If you think I'm not sick with worry, Nell, you're mistaken." Conan is absolutely giving me a job in another month—six weeks at most."

We can't wait six weeks. We're practically destitute now!

The last time I showed you our accounts we had $80. We've used up $72.60. That leaves $7.40 to carry us through April and heaven knows how much longer." Such was Nell's answer to her step-father's unreasonable attitude.

She didn't tell him of the $20 which yet remained of Ricky's money. This was hidden under the paper in her bureau drawer.

Mason chewed at his lip. "You can manage for a few days. I'll get in touch with Esther. She's got to call off her high-handed nonsense. That allowance each month belongs to me. My mother left it in a bequest. The money is mine! Esther can't withhold it. There's $40 due."

Two days later Esther arrived.

She saw at once Nell was to have a child. She grew violent about it, ending up her tirade with an indignant: "It simply means I'll have to take the infant. The whole burden will be flung at me!"

"You'll take my child! It is the last thing on the face of the earth I've thought of or would permit!"

"Indeed! And I suppose you think I wouldn't make a good mother? The big clumsy ox wouldn't know what to do with a baby!"

Esther came and took the iron from Nell's hand. "Go take care of your mother. I'll launder this!"

Esther ran the iron back and forth with quick, angry jerks. She was remembering that immortal afternoon when Graham Kent, said, woolly:

"Essie, you've the most beautiful eyes, you've the most tempting mouth" and took the pink rose from his lapel to twist it in the ribbon at her throat. Then his fingers lightly [illegible] and forth along her throat. They're quixotic thrill. Down the years it remained. She went home that day, work with relationship, dreamed of marriage and a child who would look like Graham. She mourned her loss as desperately as though the love and the child of that love had been realized.

Nell, the little fool rushing into marriage and poverty would have the richness. Esther envied her.

I'll Help You

"I can knit excellently, as you know," she said brusquely just before leaving. "I'll make afghans and sweaters for it. You'll need to buy but a few blankets. I'm leaving you $40."

"That's for this month and last. Don't give one penny to your step-father, no matter what fight he puts up. I'll cut you off absolutely, if you do. I've very little money.

"I'll try to keep the wretched roof over your heads until your child is born and your mother dies. Let's hope neither will be long delayed!"

And just who is the head of this house, young lady? Can't I pay rent and buy food? The money is mine. I think I carefully explained that. Whether Esther likes it or not, she's forced to turn it over."

She came upon demand didn't she? Let's have no more monkey shines if you please. Hand over my allowance."

"I'll not [illegible] She expressly forbade this."

Oh, yeah? And I'm to come to a cent of a girl and her for curlers and lunch money, I suppose? Come through before I make you."

The blood shot into her step-father's face. His lip curled back. He looked cruel. Like an animal. "You'll rob me of my money, will you? Try and get away with it."

Nell stood at bay, frightened to the heart. He might search the house and coming upon the money spend it recklessly on that little golden girl. They would be destitute [illegible]

She eased on the table [illegible] thing.

Get me that forty dollars. Now!"

I won't!"

Okay. You'll pay for your thievery. And how."

He stormed out of the room, banging the door loudly.

Nell sank to a chair, emptied of thought and strength.

"You've quarrelled again, Nell? What did Henry want?" Nell looked up wildly. Her mother edged into the room with creeping steps and a piece of worn blanket about her shoulders. She looked ghastly—old, yellow, tottering, with the fading red hair like a dying fire.

"The money Esther gave us."

"It belongs to him," said Mom, gasping. Oh, why can't I go! Would all be free."

Nell brought a robe, wrapped it about her mother. She patted her mother's claw-like hand.

Tears came to Mom's eyes. "Why are you so good to me, Nell?"

Someone should be, Mom dear.

Candid Camera View of Drama in the Evening

By ANNICE BRINK

GO ALL IN BLACK for sheer drama—a long transparent velvet wrap as mysterious as the night, especially when its shirred hood goes over your head, and a picture gown of moire whose pattern suggests the faint glimmer and flowing movement of a dark river. That is the ensemble Miss Gladys Willar of Brookline wears (left) as she waits in the lobby of the Brunswick's Casino. Very tiny puff sleeves and a scarlet and purple splash of velvet flower reveal themselves when the wrap is thrown off. Right, Miss Ethel Cochrane, of Boston, models the dinner suit fashion which is setting the Continent ago. This one is green moire, with its schoolgirl jacket all done up in gold kid bows and gumdrop buttons. When the jacket is removed, the gown is purely formal. The frivolous evening bag, a rosette of transparent velvet, is an excellent suggestion for your Christmas list. In fact, the same applies to the velvet evening coat. Both gowns are extremely inexpensive; the velvet coat is moderately priced. For shopping details, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her.

"Don't Tell Mom"

"Don't tell Mom about it," Nell whispered. "And you come in the kitchen and stand near me."

But Nell had gone to her mother's room in answer to a plaintive moan. In that moment her step-father entered. He caught Jimmy by the collar and was cuffing him viciously, knocking his head back and forth.

Nell flung between them, raging:

Sunshine Prevents Anemia

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

IT IS only within recent years that the medical profession has met with much success in the treatment of pernicious anemia and other anemic disturbances.

Yet our present treatment for chlorosis dates back many years, to the days when little was known about scientific medicine.

Chlorosis is an anemic condition confined to young girls between the ages of 18 and 25 years. It is often referred to as "green sickness" because of the greenish-yellow tinge of the skin of the sufferer. This peculiar disturbance is promoted by a lack of exercise and fresh air. It is especially common among those individuals who are undernourished, overworked and confined to poorly-lighted and badly-ventilated rooms.

The disease is rarely, if ever, found among country-bred girls. But it is commonly seen in girls who are away from home and who have become careless in their choice of food.

VICTIMS NERVOUS

Victims of chlorosis are nervous and easily irritated. They are especially sensitive to the slightest criticism or discipline. As a rule, they avoid others, confining themselves to the indoors.

Within a short time the patient loses weight and has no appetite. In addition to the peculiar pallor of the skin, there may be some swelling of the face, hands and ankles. Digestive disturbance, constipation, fainting spells, restlessness, heart palpitation and even fever may be accompanying symptoms of this disorder.

Chlorosis differs from other anemias in that once the disorder is recognized it is easily corrected. Improvement is immediately noted when the diet is changed. It should include a variety of fresh fruits, vegetables and cereals, as well as milk, cream, butter, eggs and other such nutritious foods.

But of most benefit is an abundance of fresh air and sunlight.

CHAPTER 521

AS LILLIAN and Hugh disappeared into the library, I scored myself for vacillation, and for being what Dicky would describe as "a bum sport," and my mother-in-law as "wanting to eat my cake and have it, too."

One part of me reveled in the luxurious indolence and freedom from care which Harriet's edict had given me.

But another side, equally strong, protested violently—yet, I knew, futilely — against being compelled to turn over tasks which should be mine to Lillian's already overburdened shoulders.

I reminded myself sardonically that I might as well "revel" to my heart's content, for I might "protest" until I was "black in the face" and it would avail me nothing. Harriet's edict was backed not only by her own authority as trained nurse, and by her husband's as physician, but by my husband, my father and Lillian. I might as well accept the role of "innocent bystander" first as last. I would have no other until my strength was fully recovered, and especially would I be compelled to inaction during this week-end of Marion's birthday, and the opening of her lockbox.

Marion's eighteenth birthday!

I leaned back in my chair and gave myself up to a lazy, retrospective look along those eighteen years, or rather that part of them since I had learned of the child's existence.

The kaleidoscope of the years gave me many pictures. I saw Lillian again as she appeared at my first meeting with her, overdressed, loud-voiced, with dyed hair and atrocious make-up. How I had detested and feared her—because of the gossip that had linked her name with Dicky's—and yet, even from the first, I had sensed the sterling worth, the high courage, the royal generosity, the unobtrusive self-sacrifice behind the painted mask and flamboyant manner.

I saw her again upon the day when, because she realized the need of utter frankness between us, she broke the silence of years and told me of the terrible price her rascally husband had made her pay for her perfectly innocent maternal care and nursing of Dicky, then a mere boy, through an attack of pneumonia.

Armed with affidavits, obtained by the bribery of servants, Tom Morton had given her the choice of giving up her child to the care of himself and his mother—never to see her again—or of suing her for divorce and naming Dicky as corespondent. With an exaggerated horror of ruining the career of an innocent, high-minded boy, she yielded to the terms laid down by her scoundrelly husband and gave up her baby girl.

It was during that interview that I capitulated wholly to Lillian's charm and integrity, and then began the friendship which has blessed all my life.

The turning kaleidoscope showed me another picture, that of Lillian's ecstasy when her child was restored to her. Marion's father, on his deathbed acknowledged the crime he had committed and gave his tiny daughter back to her mother.

The telephone shrilled and I heard Katie scurrying to answer it.

"Oh! Meester," she began, then gasped as if someone had struck her.

No, I no say," she said. "Yah!

MEN LOVE PEPPY GIRLS
You can become peppy this easy way
If you are happy and peppy and full of fun men will take you places. If you are lively, they will invite you to dances and parties.
BUT, if you are tired and lifeless and always tired out, men won't be interested in you. Men don't like "quiet" girls. Men go to parties to enjoy themselves. They want girls along who are full of pep.
LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND helps give you pep and energy. For over sixty years girls and women have been telling this famous old medicine to help give them strength, energy, sparkle. Notice the girls and women about you who have lots of pep. Ask them what makes them that way. Most likely they'll tell you. Then tell give the credit to LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND. You should give LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND a try. Girls with pep are more attractive to men.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Too Rigid Paternal Rule Brings Tragedy

HUNDREDS of letters which come to this column from boys and girls concern Strict Parents, whose children chafe under the disciplinary measures of a past generation, especially when the domestic curfew rings at 10 o'clock or earlier.

A tragedy which has to do with this rigid "home rule" of a mountain district where women folk must be in at sundown, recently gained wide publicity.

In the hill country at Wise, Virginia, where Edith Maxwell has been given a sentence for killing her father in a scuffle when he tried to beat her, husbands and wives do not often sit down together at the table. The husband eats first; the wife waits on him and her sons and accepts as her portion anything that happens to be left. She does not complain about this. It's all part of the hill code.

* * *

Edith Maxwell, the pretty 21-year-old school teacher, had been away to get her education, and she didn't think silk stockings, high-heeled shoes and a dash of powder on a shiny nose were sinful things prompted by the devil. But Trigg Maxwell, her old father, did. And these were some of the things which led to the famous murder trial, and Edith's sentence to 25 years in prison.

In that neighborhood, a man is absolute lord and master of his household. When the sun drops behind the hill, the women folk must be home unless the entire family take to the covered wagon—few have motors—to go to camp meeting, harvest-home supper, or some such community gathering. Even then, the girls have to be mighty circumspect.

But Edith Maxwell knew how things were done beyond the horizon. She earned her own living as a school-teacher, and the domestic "law" that a girl must be home by sundown seemed to her absurd. Furthermore, she had seen her father, old Trigg Maxwell, drunk and brawling a good many times, and she questioned his right to exercise absolute authority over the women of his family.

* * *

Not only was the town agog over the trial, but all up and down the range the mountain folk feel that more than the trial is involved. It's a clash between the new order and the old.

Must a girl, who is of age and earns her own living, be under the thumb of a patriarchial father who thinks the women should be home at sundown? And who drinks even as he tries to enforce this law.

There is much sympathy for Edith Maxwell, and when her lawyer, R. P. Bruce, made a motion to set aside the verdict and asked for time in which to file a brief, the time was granted.

When she heard the verdict Edith said: "For God's sake, take care of my mother. I don't care about myself."

While Edith Maxwell's is an extreme case, the letters I receive prove that many young people these days bitterly rebel against parents who try to regulate their children's lives according to standards that prevailed when the parents themselves were young.

DEAR ELSIE:

"You have an amazing understanding of your sex, and, I suspect, an equally amazing one of the opposite sex."
—Says Biddeford, Maine, Woman.

THIS is one of a series of $1 prize-winning letters, written on the subject, "What I Think of Elsie Robinson's Articles, 'Listen, World!' "

Mrs. R. A. Lanouette, 45 Union street, Biddeford, Me., writes:

Dear Elsie:

Other women may turn first to the cooking or beauty pages of the Boston Evening American and gradually work over to your article. Not this writer!

Elsie's column first, to perhaps "set me straight" for the next day—or to work me out of the doldrums of the present day. She has an amazing understanding of her sex, and, I suspect, an equally amazing one of the opposite sex!

In any case, she's the greatest pepper-upper among the columnists, and exactly what I need!

A New Discovery in Beauty

Herbal Circulation Cream Restores Youthful, Radiant Glow

By ARLINE GOULD

TOO FEW women these days realize what a healthy, active circulation does in the way of beauty. While eyeshadows and lipstick still play star roles in the drama of loveliness, it's just as well not to rely on them too seriously.

If you are an active, highly energized type of person, intent on living life at its fullest, the chances are that you are doing a lot of tearing down—and very little building up.

Don't for one minute think that you can disregard all laws of beauty, and then hope for an occasional facial or salon treatment to put you together again.

There's no more devastating moment in life than that in which you look in the mirror and find suddenly that your face is showing signs of age. Or that your skin is turning yellow or crinkling forming at the eyes.

The sooner you get started on the road that leads to beauty—via good health, of course—the better your looks, morale and general self-respect.

Take for instance the case of a skin that has lost its vibrant, alive look and has turned gray and leathery. Or consider arms and hands which are fast acquiring with brown spots and freckles dotting the surface.

Even at this late stage of autumn (by actual calendar count winter doesn't start until next week) we still have our bleaching problems. Particularly if the skin has lost its clear color and has become dull, and faded looking.

An excellent form of self-help for such emergencies is a herbal circulation mixture that brightens a drab skin and whips up the circulation. It's an effective all-around complexion agent for it not only bleaches and brightens the skin, but removes brown spots from face and hands.

As a bleach for arms and shoulders it is unsurpassed. It comes in cream form (brownish looking in appearance) and it is spread like a mask over the skin surface. It is left on for three to fifteen minutes, depending upon the sensitiveness of the skin.

If you would like to know the name of this herbal circulation mixture that is a short cut to a vibrant, alive look, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Mrs. Beeckman on Good Manners

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

I—When buying a gift for a bride-to-be, which are the correct initials to have put on the gifts—the girl's name, Violet E. House, or the man's name, Edward O. Cruze?

Thank you

1 There is no definite answer to this question as to whether the bride's silver and linen are marked with the initials of her maiden name or those of her name-to-be.

It is the bride-elect who must decide which she prefers, and whichever she prefers is right. Formerly, as you know, the initials of her maiden name were always the ones that were used. But now, just as often, she chooses to have the initials of her name-to-be used.

So the wisest thing for us to do, when we are proposing to give a wedding gift that is to be marked, is to inquire of the bride-to-be which type of initials she prefers.

Or when we buy the gift, we make arrangements with the shop where we buy it, that the bride may take it to the shop and have it marked as she chooses. And this, of course, must be made clear to the bride.

If this bride chooses to use her maiden initial, she may use all three V. E. H., or only two V. H. If she uses the initials of her not-to-be name (i.e., V. H. C.—Viola Hingus Cruze—or only the last initial, C.

She does not use the initials of the formal name of her husband-to-be, E. O. C., but the initials of her informal married name.

Cuddly Toys

CUDDLE TOYS — PATTERN 1106

DID YOU ever see such pleased expressions as these toys are wearing on their embroidered faces?

That's because they know they are the sort of plaything the children love best.

Kiddies adore their bright colors and soft cuddly shapes. They're the easiest sort of toy to make, too, being of just two pieces each, with clothes and features embroidered on in simple stitches. Apron, cap and ribbons are separate. Directions tell you how to make the little girl's curls from wool.

Pattern 1106 comes to you with a transfer pattern of these three toys and directions for making them; illustrations of all stitches used; material requirements.

Fruits Give Tang to Menus

By MARTHA LEE

CITRUS FRUITS add a tang to winter menus, making them welcome additions, whether served in the form of juice, halved fruit or in combination with most any of the seasonal fruits now so abundant.

Grapefruit, at this time, is excellent and very valuable for its mineral and vitamin content—especially its vitamin C—tends to build good health. Here are some of the various ways of serving:

CALIFORNIA FRUIT COCKTAIL

3 grapefruit
3 oranges
1 cup banana balls
2 tbsps. lemon juice
6 tbsps. powdered sugar
1 small bottle maraschino cherries

Peel and segment the grapefruit and oranges. Combine ingredients and serve very cold.

Or, in place of banana balls, use grapes (seeded), strawberries, diced pear or cantaloupe. Serve in grapefruit shells. In salads, grapefruit combines well with other fruits—also with fish, which variation is not so well known. A recipe which we believe we will "sell" you on this idea is the following:

GRAPEFRUIT AND SALMON SALAD
(Serves 6 .4)

2 cups grapefruit pieces
2 cups diced cucumber
1 cup diced cucumber
1 cup diced celery
Lettuce

Mix the grapefruit, salmon, cucumber and celery, and top with slightly sweetened Grapefruit French Dressing, made with 4 tbsps. grapefruit juice, 4 tbsps. salad oil, salt, pepper. Serve on lettuce, with mayonnaise.

GRAPEFRUIT, PEAR AND GRAPE SALAD
(Individual Service)

Combine ¾ cup each of grapefruit pieces, diced pear and seeded white grapes. Serve with Fruit Mayonnaise, made with 1-3 cup grapefruit juice and ⅔ cup mayonnaise, slightly sweetened; or a cooked dressing.

First Trump Trick Temptations

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

When a suit is so split that a trick must be conceded to the adversaries at one point or another, a fine player will take care to lose it at such time and to such an opponent as will do him the least harm.

Occasionally, this will call for a play which appears most unusual and certainly in today's hand, played by Mr. J. C. Stablein, the temptation to win the first trump trick must have been all but overwhelming, but he properly resisted.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable

	♠ 8 7 5 2 ♡ A ◇ A K J 6 2 ♣ Q 7 5
♠ 10 6 4 3 ♡ K Q J 9 ◇ 9 5 ♣ K 6 2	North West East South	♠ Q ♡ 8 7 5 4 2 ◇ 8 7 3 ♣ J 10 8 4
	♠ A K J 9 ♡ 10 6 3 ◇ Q 10 4 ♣ A 9 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the King of hearts and dummy won with the Ace. With six tricks in the minor suits and the Ace of hearts, all Mr. Stablein needed was to secure five trump tricks.

Trumps had to be drawn to safeguard the running of the diamonds so a low trump was led from dummy.

When East played the Queen, declarer stopped to think instead of hastily winning the trick. If this were a singleton, as appeared likely, West had started with four to the ten, in which case one trump trick would have to be lost.

If the Queen were overtaken, and two hearts ruffed in dummy (necessary to secure the five trump tricks) West would be able to ruff the third round of diamonds and shut out two tricks in that way.

Mr. Stablein therefore let the Queen hold! At this point, no continuation by the adversaries could prevent him from ruffing two hearts in dummy, drawing trumps in his own hand, and cruising the rest of the tricks.

MOTHER IN PITIFUL APPEAL

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

ROBERT E. ROGERS

There used to be a popular comic song—why do I connect it in memory with the late Jack Hazzard?—the refrain of which was "My God, how the money rolls in!" For the past quarter century at least, that is — or should have been—the theme song at Harvard.

This time, as you probably have observed in the public prints, Lucius Nathan Littauer, glove manufacturer and member of Congress in Theodore Roosevelt's days, has offered Harvard two millions of dollars for a Graduate School of Public Administration to train brilliant young men for public service, with doubtless one eye at least on the traditional excellence of the British civil service.

And President Conant has already appointed a committee to plan the school, consisting of President Dodds of Princeton, the Federal Civil Service Commissioner White, the Dean of Harvard's School of Business Administration Donham, former Harvard professor William B. Munro, now at California Tech in Pasadena, and a couple more professors of history and government at Cambridge.

School Expected to Have Thorough Harvard Setup

The school will probably open in September, 1937. The outlay for buildings will be comparatively modest, around half a million, and the rest presumably will go into staff and students' aid. The thing looks like a characteristically thorough Harvard set-up.

The intentions of the founder have been expressed as follows:

"Guided by a dean of high abilities, energy and courage, it (the new school) would, I believe, develop new techniques in public service, and as a laboratory for testing the problems of public service it would be the best hope of avoiding disasters arising from untried experiments in government and administration and would tend to raise the level of American life."

Can it be that Mr. Littauer is thinking of the NRA and AAA and all the other letters of the alphabet, which might reasonably be considered "disasters arising from untried experiments in government and administration?" It looks a little as if the school may want to turn out graduates suitable for sitting on commissions, in case Mr. Hoover or one of his school of thought returns to office.

Government Administration Now Highly Specialized

"Government administration has of late years enormously broadened, taking in most forms of human activity, and become highly specialized and technical. Governmental administration for the true welfare of the people demands a special training imbued with the ideals and ambitions for our country's benefit. Our public administration needs men trained with a broad outlook into the history, politics, and economics of the past. Its importance will merit the creation of a school with an independent faculty and organization such as has been developed at other graduate schools at Harvard."

It seems that 40 years ago Mr. Littauer was in Congress and never got over it. Apparently he didn't care for Congress, because his chief object in founding the school is to turn out "men competently fitted for government." But he doesn't restrict the scope of the school to federal government.

Danger Is of Producing Academic Crackpots

I do hope the school will be kept practical. My fear is that, according to usual methods of graduate schools, it will be based so firmly on book-learning and philosophies of government, that its output will be mostly academic crackpots. That is a real danger, as anyone who knows professors intimately will realize. A few professional politicians of acknowledged skill in administration, provided they are sufficiently articulate and frank, would do a great deal to leaven the lump.

I should like to see a course given, for instance, by Lincoln Steffens in his prime and his old friend and adversary, Martin Lomasney. That would be infinitely more useful than the most scholarly course ever worked up on "Government of the Mercantile Cities of the Hanseatic League from 1250-1300."

Asks Christmas Joy For Hungry Flock

"Could you trust me sir, a stranger, with a box of food, even damaged things, just so I could surprise my family?

"On my honor, I promise to send you 25 cents every Friday morning until I pay you in full. You are my only hope of bringing Christmas into my home."

So writes a Somerville mother, in one of the most heart-breaking cases yet to come to the attention of the Christmas Basket Fund Editor of the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

YOU can help this mother. HELP IT NOW!

The opportunity offers itself tonight. The Hotel Brunswick is the place, where the second big benefit show in aid of the 23rd annual Christmas Basket Fund takes place in the Casino Room.

Those who attend tonight will have the satisfaction of knowing that by so doing they are contributing their bit in helping those unfortunates on whom Fortune has ceased to smile.

More than 1500 appeals are being received daily for aid on Christmas Day; for a scrap of warm clothing for a child, or a meal for sick and hungry wife or husband. HELP THEM NOW.

Commencing at 8 p. m., a de luxe dinner will be served by the management, headed by Director L. Marshal Tompson and his aide, Ernest Borden. The dinner will be priced at $2.50 a person and a generous percentage of the proceeds will be turned over to the 23rd annual Christmas Basket Fund of these two newspapers.

Theater Benefit

The entertainment program will begin at 10 o'clock. On the bill in addition to Miss Carroll the regular Brunswick floor show and others will be Miss Sheila O'Donovan Rossa, popular stage and radio singer; Georgo H. MacFarlane of Arlington, radio tenor; the "Sixteen G-Girls" and many other stage and radio acts.

The "G-Girls," whose symmetry and precision in executing difficult dance routines remind ons of the English "Tiller Girls," are making their initial Boston appearance under direction of Miss Gertrude Dolan.

BASKET APPLICATIONS MUST BE APPROVED

In order that Christmas Baskets may go only to deserving and needy families, each application must be approved by a priest, a minister, a rabbi, or charitable organization. If you wish to apply for a basket, therefore, get the signature of one of these persons.

Address all names and lists as well as contributions to the Christmas Basket Fund, Boston Evening American, 6 Winthrop square, Boston.

Among other acts in the Brunswick show will be Ben Coleman, formerly with Ben Bernie's band, Adrienne Duplain, 11-year-old singing star of Waban, and Francis Martorana of West Newton, tenor, who won the William Randolph Hearst cup for voice in California.

In addition, the "Three Winter Sports," a dancing team composed of Dorothy Bell, Louise Totten and Jerry Marenghi, will entertain.

And in addition to the above will be Margaret O'Toole of Roxbury and Dorothy Bell of Ferndale, dancers. The Mer-Ven sisters, Mildred and Adelaide, harmonizers of Dedham, will also appear.

Brown Derby Aids

Following the B ick benefit night, Anthony ado's Brown Derby will have own Christmas Basket Fund party next Sunday evening. The Brown Derby, located in Arlington street, near Stuart, is unique as a night club.

The Brown Derby, too, will have the 16 "G-Girls" as one of the features of Christmas Basket Fund Night. In addition to the regular program of entertainment there will be another special bill composed of leading stage and radio performers. Jim McHale, genial leader of the Brown Derby orchestra, will act as master of ceremonies.

As in the case of Club Mayfair and the Brunswick, the proprietors of the Brown Derby are contributing a generous percentage of the receipts to the 23d Christmas Basket Fund.

Part of the brilliant program arranged for the Brown Derby on Sunday night next will be announced tomorrow. The regular floor show at the Derby lasts for 45 minutes, including eight fascinating girls.

"A Skater's Dream"—star feature of the Gala Skater's Frolic of the Olympic Skating Club at Boston Arena—is another Christmas Basket Fund benefit. It takes place Saturday evening from 8 to 12, at the Arena, and admission tickets, priced at only 40 cents, are on sale at Basket Fund Headquarters, 294 Devonshire street, just off Summer, Telephone Liberty 4000.

Another $100 for Christmas Basket Fund

WALTER E. O'HARA

A check for $100 was the contribution today of Walter E. O'Hara, Narragansett race track head, to the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund. He is shown handing his gift to Miss Elizabeth Shanley of the Christmas Basket Fund secretarial staff.

Will Try Again to Work Out Life's 'Puzzle'

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Because she found life a "puzzle" which "didnt seem worth working out," this brown-haired, blue-eyed Dorchester girl, Miss Rose Barker, 25, is in Boston city hospital today, recovering from effects of an attempt at suicide by drowning in the Charles river. Now, however, she is determined to "begin over" in New York, where she says she will try to find some better solution than death for the "puzzle" which all of us have to "work out."

GIRL IN SUICIDE TRY TO START LIFE ANEW

By BETTY DI PESA

The attractive, blue-eyed and brown-haired bookkeeper leaves City Hospital today, where she has been since being rescued night before last by David Burnstein of Amory street, Brookline.

"Life is a puzzle— didn't seem worth while ating out," she said. "Several of my girl friends had died of late. My job was worrying me."

"I wasn't being given much work to do and I was afraid I would be fired. I guess it was just an accumulation of things. I thought too much; I have always been very introspective."

She signed and went on to confess a "big-shot" complex.

"I wanted to meet big people. I had several boy friends but my 'dates' were simple. Hum-drum like my life. I was too ambitious and wanted to be somebody—anybody but myself."

The girl said she planned to leave Boston.

"I'm going to begin life all over —in New York where my married sister lives. She has a baby and perhaps if I get away from office work and learn to take care of a baby I can find myself. I'm going to try."

Miss Barker manifested little interest in the account of her rescue or the identity of Burnstine, her rescuer.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ann Marsters

So—you have been fooling us all along. Or else you've been hoarding your pennies under the mattress and now you appear to be rolling in wealth.

ANN MARSTERS

You have even surprised the department stores — they are happy to announce that it's the "biggest" Christmas in a long, long time.

And it's the more expensive gifts that are being favored. In fact, the "trifles" gift departments are not doing nearly as well as they did last year.

Happily, you are keeping your heads in your affluence. You are buying practical gifts.

Blankets, sheets and pillow cases. (Christmas wrapping, please.)

Men's slippers. (Last year you bought them for $1.65, but this year you sniff at anything under $2.45.)

An amazing number of men's lounging robes.

Much more expensive toys.

And the infants' department has had a tremendous increase in sales.

Pastel-Tinted Playthings Washouts in Babies' Eyes

Which reminds me to tell you that babies do not like pastel-tinted playthings. They may look adorable to you—but they're washouts in the babies' eyes. They like their toys just as brilliant as they can be. Don't you remember?

CYNICAL?

Though I think you delightful,
I'd find it most frightful
To take you for better or worse.
Our romance will thrive
If we two are wise
In escaping the permanent curse.

So let's be romantic
But not too dramatic
And love will be sweet as it seems;
And we'll take it for granted
That you'll be supplanted
Someday by the man of my dreams.

—MARY LEE.

This was contributed by J. S. M., who overheard it at the University Club bar:

Two Harvard men were seated at the bar, having two highballs and a rather intense argument. One of them, feeling sure of his ground, suddenly raised his voice and said, "That isn't so, I'll bet you a nickel." Instantly he realized that the whole room had heard him, so he corrected himself, "That is, I mean a quarter."

Train Runs Express Between Two Stations

A Wellesley girl is still wondering who the kind man was who helped her out of a lot of trouble.

She was returning to college after the Thanksgiving holidays and had arrived as far as the North Station. From there she had to take the shuttle train to the South Station where she must catch the 7.33 (a.m.) back to Wellesley.

The shuttle train was late. She stood on the platform, jumping up and down with impatience.

A gentleman offered to help her. She explained her predicament. The shuttle train arrived. The gentleman spoke to the motorman —and presto! Much to the amazement and annoyance of the rest of the passengers, the train ran express from the North to South station.

Yes, she caught her train to Wellesley.

HEARD ABOUT TOWN—Mayor and Mrs. Mansfield didn't sit in the official box at the horseshow Saturday night, because Police Commissioner McSweeney, who was already occupying it, refused to budge . . . Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt is writing her memoirs (via a ghost) which she will call, "If It Takes My Life." Constance Bennett wants to make a movie of it . . . Walter O'Hara is reported to have lost $50,000 on the horses at Bowie . . . On the top of the show case at Hodgson Kennard in which the Jonker diamond, surrounded by lesser stones, is on display, there rests a small sign which reads: "Please help yourself to one of these." (We tried to—but perhaps it refers to the booklets.)

LEWIS HANEY ON SILVER:

Roosevelt Bilked BY OLD PROPAGANDA About Soft Money

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University.)

New York, Dec. 12—There is dynamite in silver.

It has always been a peculiar political factor in this country. Whenever a depression comes, the cranks arise to proclaim that "the people" need more money, and demand that we monetise silver.

They are, of course, joined by silver mine interests, and are seconded by Greenbackers and all soft-money advocates.

* * *

Roosevelt fell for this old soft-money propaganda, so we have been buying and storing tons of silver at inflated prices. The stuff is probably worth around 30 cents an ounce. We have been paying 60 to 77 cents an ounce.

Why?

Because he wants to win the political support of the advocates of currency inflation.

Because he does not understand money, and appears to believe that silver is as good a "monetary reserve" as gold.

Because he wants to cheapen the dollar, in order to force us to give more dollars for the goods we buy. In other words, he has tried to raise prices by depreciating the dollar.

* * *

As a result of all this folly, the administration has bid the price of silver up like any market operator. It has rigged the silver market to levels more than double its normal value.

This has driven the last large nation which had clung to the silver standard, China, to demonetise silver. China was being ruined by our tampering with the value of her standard money (silver), so she abandoned it.

Her next move was to accumulate all her silver, with the idea of selling it to us at our fancy price—playing us for the "suckers" that we are (thanks to the Roosevelt administration). Meanwhile, as I pointed out a month or so ago, individual Chinese have been smuggling great quantities of silver to unload on Uncle Sam, the silver Santa Claus.

So the world silver market finally came to the point where everybody was selling the stuff, and Mr. Morganthau (acting for Mr. Roosevelt) was the only buyer. He didn't put in a bid one day, and the market cracked. Nobody else would pay such absurd prices as we have.

Probably several developments have caused the President to change his policy again.

One is the realisation that the world is not going to remonetise silver, and there will be little demand for it. Thus we face a huge loss on our purchases.

China's action made this obvious.

Another factor is our growing gold hoard, which makes it an endless task to accumulate silver up to 25 per cent of our gold.

Then, too, the franc has been saved again, so there is no need now to supply dollar exchange by buying silver.

* * *

Don't blame England. Senator Thomas says England made "suckers" of us. Suckers are born, not made.

Trustees of the Boston Metropolitan District have awarded an issue of $7,711,000 serial bonds to a syndicate headed by Halsey Stuart Co. on its bid of 97.585 for 2½s.

U. S. STILL Buying SILVER PURCHASED ALL WEEK

By Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 12—Secretary Morgenthau today denied the United States stopped purchasing silver and asserted he had bought the metal every day this week.

"I am continuing to carry out the mandate of the silver purchase act," eMrgenthau said. "I have bought silver every day this week—on Monday, on Tuesday, and on Wednesday, in many different places."

It was on Tuesday the London silver market collapsed because of a lack of buyers. Brokers attributed this condition to a treasury halt in purchases.

Morgenthau said the department had departed from its usual practice of concentrating purchases in London, but refused to locate this week's purchases. He declined to say whether this departure would be continued.

Likewise he would not say whether any direct purchases were made in China.

Morgenthau Hints

Morgenthau hinted that the silver price situation may have been involved in the treasury action when he read a section of the silver purchase act and called specific attention to this passage, governing buying in carrying out the law's mandate to purchase until the price of silver reached $1.29 an ounce or the treasury's monetary stocks were one-third those of gold:

"Upon such terms and provisions as he (the secretary of the treasury) may deem reasonable and most advantageous to the public interest."

Morgenthau told newsmen at his regular press conference that he pledge to the Congressional silver bloc, made some months ago, still held good.

At that time the secretary assured a silver committee he would "carry out enthusiastically" the provisions of the silver purchase act.

The secretary's statement was made as London brokers acted found difficulty in setting a price. Apparently they were unable to reach a decision pending advices from America.

It was reported in London, the market situation was less tense than in past days, with an offering believed to be smaller, but the definite condition of the silver market was not immediately ascertainable.

Bar Gold

London, Dec. 12 (AP)—Bar gold declined ½ penny to 141s 2d (U. S. equivalent $34.76.)

ATTACKS Social Credit SCHEME CALLED FUTILE BY BAY STATER

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service.)

New York, Dec. 12—Economic recovery and re-employment are setting in motion recuperative forces which, in my opinion, will make the public more critical of "crackpot" remedies.

Authentic progress must spring from a genuine understanding of the nature of wealth and income. Plans, based on fallacies, in the nature of things must prove snares and delusions.

Three major planks of a so-called new economics have recently been in vogue—share the wealth schemes, the Townsend pension plan and "social credit." Scholarly efforts have been made by the Brookings Institution and the National Bureau of Economic Research to give a factual basis for better grasping the essentials concerning the distribution of wealth and income.

Analysis

Harvey S. Chase, a certified public accountant of South Hamilton, Mass., has attempted a critical analysis of the main proposals. He especially disputes Major Douglas' glib assertion that "bankers create money by strokes of their pens from nothing." As a matter of fact, when bankers function legitimately and soundly in extending credit, they are recognizing values that exist, rather than creating them out of the air.

In observing the economic system at work it is essential to distinguish between healthy functions and pathologies, abuses.

Mr. Chase analyzes what takes place when a bank creates a book credit, or a deposit, when purchasing a security from the public.

"No money has been gained," Mr. Chase points out in the current American Economic Review. "None," he continues, "has been lost. No deposits (bank debts) have been permanently increased in total. Neither gain has developed (other than interest); no 'creation of money' has occurred; there has been no 'acquiring of securities for nothing,' as social credit erroneously avers. Major Douglas' claim is futile. He does not 'think through.'"

Reserve Bank Heads to Meet

Another clash within the Federal Reserve System over what should be done about excess reserves of member banks will take place in Washington next Tuesday when 12 Federal Reserve Bank heads meet here.

They will have before them the recent recommendations of the Federal Advisory Council, which opposed that the system reduce holdings of government securities to obviate the possibility of undue credit inflation made feasible by the present high volume of excess reserves.

Brookline Trust

Brookline Trust Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of $3 per share, payable January 2 to stock of record December 10.

Outlook Bullish

The general business outlook is particularly favorable both from near and long-term viewpoints, Alexander Calder, president of Union Bag & Paper Corp., declared in an address before the Savannah Civic Club at the complimentary luncheon marking progress of construction on Union Bag's new $4,000,000 papermaking plant in Savannah.

Mr. Calder disclosed that so active has been the demand for the corporation's products in recent years and so urgent the need for new sources of supplies that orders have actually been refused in considerable volume pending expansion of facilities.

"I am more bullish on the future than when we decided to build this mill," he asserted.

SPOT SILVER Price Is Set

London, Dec. 12 (AP)—The price on spot silver was set today at 28⅜ pence an ounce, ⅜ penny lower than yesterday's quotation of 27¾ pence.

The fixation was made after silver brokers had considered the situation several hours and long after the normal hour of setting the price.

Rail Bankruptcy

St. Louis, Dec. 12 (AP)—A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in Federal Court today by the St. Louis Southwestern (Cotton Belt) Railway.

Southwestern Bell Refunding

The second big refunding on behalf of an American Telephone & Telegraph subsidiary is being consummated today with offering by Morgan & Co., Inc., and associates of $45,000,000 Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. first and refunding 3½s, due 1964.

Priced, according to the prospectus, at 102½ the bonds yield about 3.33 per cent to the first par call date in 1961.

"Pennsy" Loadings

Pennsylvania Railroad own line loadings for week ended December 7 showed an increase of 14.5 per cent over like week of 1934. For the week ended November 30 they showed an increase of 18.3 per cent.

THE COMPANY Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, all of the common stock of which, except Directors' qualifying shares, is owned by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is one of the associated telephone companies comprising the Bell System. The Company, incorporated in Missouri in 1882, is engaged in the telephone business in Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas and in a small portion of Illinois adjacent to St. Louis. The Company's properties consist principally of telephone instruments and facilities for their interconnection, the latter consisting chiefly of central office switching equipment and connecting lines. The business of the Company is subject to regulation, within their respective jurisdictions, by the Federal Communications Commission and by certain state and municipal authorities.

ISSUE OF SERIES B The net proceeds to the Company from the contemplated sale of the $45,000,000 Series B Bonds, after deducting the estimated expenses of the Company in connection with such sale, are expected to be approximately $44,325,000, and are to be applied, together with funds which the Company expects to obtain from its current cash and temporary cash investments, to the retirement of the Series A Bonds which the Company is calling for redemption on February 1, 1936, at 105% and accrued interest.

EARNINGS The Income Statements in the Offering Prospectus show the following as the Company's Operating Revenues, Total Income (the amount available for Fixed Charges), Fixed Charges (all interest charges and amortization of discount on funded debt), and Net Income, for the periods indicated below:

1933	$72,376,713.96	$16,368,136.79	$3,303,576.51	$13,064,560.28
1934	67,836,821.58	15,117,635.32	3,206,502.36	11,911,132.97
1934	70,047,320.39	16,165,413.61	3,050,822.95	13,114,589.63
1935†	65,814,946.50	13,063,789.58	3,236,473.28	10,827,317.30

†Nine months ended September 30.

Include approximately $329,000, $456,000, $450,000 and $386,000, respectively, which the Company estimated would be refundable in whole or in part to subscribers in the event of adverse decisions in pending rate cases. Reservations of Surplus have been made against this contingency*

SERIES B BONDS The Series B Bonds will be issued under the Company's First and Refunding Mortgage and will be secured by a lien on substantially all real estate, buildings and telephone plant owned by the Company in Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas and appertaining to or useful in the transaction of its business in those States. Upon redemption and payment of the Series A Bonds, the Series B Bonds will constitute the only then existing indebtedness secured by lien on such property, except for prior tax and assessment liens and prior closed mortgages on small portions of such property securing $144,900 of bonds, of which $5,900 are matured but unpresented. The Mortgage does not cover any property in Kansas or Illinois.

Series B Bonds are limited to the amount of $45,000,000 now authorized. The Mortgage, however, permits the issue of additional bonds of other series, which would rank pari passu with the Series B Bonds.

The Mortgage permits the Company, in certain instances, to dispose of property covered by the Mortgage without a release from or notice to the Trustee, and also provides for releases and substitutions of such property. No notice is required to be given to bondholders in connection with any such disposal, release or substitution.

There is to be paid to a sinking fund part, to be used as a sinking fund in purchasing Series B Bonds, but only if obtainable at not exceeding their principal amount and accrued interest, the sum of $250,000, on June 1, 1936, and semi-annually thereafter; provided, however, that any unexpended balance in the fund on any semi-annual payment date to be credited on account of the payment due on that date.

UNDERWRITING Subject to certain terms and conditions, certain Underwriters named in the Offering Prospectus have severally agreed to purchase an aggregate of $44,000,000 of these Bonds from the Company at 100½%, or a total of $44,220,000, plus accrued interest. Such Bonds are to be offered to the public at 102½%, or a total of $45,100,000, plus accrued interest. The underwriting discounts are 2% or a total of $880,000. It is expected that delivery of such Bonds to the Underwriters, and payment therefor, is to be made on or about December 18, 1935. There is no firm commitment for the remaining $1,000,000 of Bonds, but the Company expects to sell such Bonds on or before February 1, 1936, without underwriting discounts or commissions, to the Trustee of Pension Funds established by the Company and by other companies of the Bell System, at 100½%, or a total of $ 1,005,000, plus accrued interest.

Price 102½% and Accrued Interest

The Underwriters have agreed to purchase $44,000,000 of these Bonds when, as and if issued, and subject to the approval of Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed, counsel for the Underwriters, and Messrs. Bryan, Williams, Cave & McPheeters, counsel for the Company. It is expected that delivery of Bonds in temporary form will be made at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. on or about December 18, 1935, against payment therefor in New York funds.

Further information, in particular financial statements, is contained in the Registration Statement on file with the Commission, and in the Offering Prospectus which must be furnished to each purchaser and is obtainable only from such of the undersigned as are registered dealers in securities in this State.

Traffic SCORING Gains

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Highlight of the weekly trade survey for the Boston area is the movement of freight by railroads.

A gain of 18 per cent in the total revenue freight loaded by the New England roads and an increase in freight received from connections of 12 per cent during the past week tell the story. And helps to hammer home the sound principle that industry does expand without forcing a distinct expansion of commerce.

* * *

It might be said that the growth of rail traffic over New England lines was primarily due to consumer demand for necessities, luxuries and holiday goods rather than an increased call for materials by industry. The first named are the prime factors in the gain. But there is no denying a slow but determined expansion of the call for materials by heavy industry. The New England building permits figure supplied us my Dun & Bradstreet shows a gain of nearly 100 per cent for last week over the corresponding 1934 period. The building is far from satisfactory in this area but the trend is there and the outlook is for continued improvement.

* * *

Notebook: Chrysler is a lariat, so far as the New England area is concerned. . . . They no sooner decide it looks ready for a slide and place a short line than a Plymouth goes in and is executed . . . However, its erratic moves alone look suspicious to us . . . and we'll stay clear of either the long or short side . . . Some selling advices have been heard on Great Northern preferred . . . The reason: A new bond issue with a convertible feature may have a restraining influence market-wise . . . Union Carbide losing favor with the chartists set . . . They set their graphs of the issue suggest distribution. . . .

* * *

The market has been a difficult affair for the short-term trader. This writer has and at the same time has supplied little for long trend advices. We are interested primarily in the latter since the average investor or speculator has little excuse for competing with the professional. Until the lows of last week are decisively broken or stand under a fairly rugged selling wave we cannot expand of contract our position. The market is in sort of a no-man's-land that offers little tangible evidence as to future action and is only of interest for the unconcerned guesser.

* * *

Sharts: Minor points for bulls and bears can be made at present . . . but they don't add up to give one another and insofar as we can see simply offer added evidence that the trend is seeking a new and stronger impulse . . . Rails are disturbing because they fail to show about equal gains in the group after hovering in a top area for a week . . . Yet there is no selling of moment . . . We look at it in this way. Traders are under no obligation to be in the market every session . . . Indeed there are times when do-nothing is the only proper course.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

What do you think of this technique, boys and girls?

Those dots intrigue us, Eleanor. Is that really technique, or does Floyd need a shave? Anyhow, we think it's mighty interesting work. Many thanks, and good luck to you.

The Editor.

Trapped in Tank

Gas and Oil Threaten Death to Lexington Man

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Now LESTER F. PEASE of 87 Blossom street, Lexington, sent his suit out to be pressed. And that act saved his life. It's one of the strangest stories of luck and coincidence that I've run across in quite a while. And I've certainly run across a lot of stories in the course of a year. Nobody knows that any better than you boys and girls who send them in.

Les is a sailor, and it was his shore-going suit that he sent out to be pressed. That was down in Tampico, Mex., in August, 1928. Les had gone down there on the oil tanker Dartford. The ship was tied up at the Huestica oil dock, and the tank inspector was looking over the valves. As he put his okay on each valve, that valve was opened, and oil was allowed to flow in, loading the ship for the voyage back to the States.

The inspector passed all the valves except No. 9 on the port side. That one, he said, had too much water in it. So Les and another sailor were sent down into the rapidly filling tank to bail the water out with wooden scoops and send it up to the deck in buckets.

Now don't forget that suit Les sent out to be pressed. He was looking forward to a big time ashore that night, and he wanted to look neat for the occasion. He had sent it that morning, long before this incident happened. Well—let's get on with the rest of the story.

As the oil rose in the tanks, they became filled with gas fumes. The gas was so bad down there that both Les and his shipmate began to get light-headed. Les' pal was worse off than he was. He had sneaked ashore and got hold of some Mexican rum that morning, and he was pretty well under the weather.

By the time they had the job done both of them were about ready to collapse. The other fellow was so badly off that Les told him to go on up on deck while he gathered up the tools. The other fellow headed for the deck, and about three minutes later Les followed.

But the minute he started up the ladder he heard a slam up above, and the tank suddenly grew pitch dark. The hatch had been closed!

"I shouted," says Les, "but there was only one opening, smaller than a port hole, and the thick, hot air must have deadened my voice. I climbed the rest of the way up the ladder, tried to stick my hand through the vent hole. I couldn't reach it.

"Meanwhile the valve had been opened and I could hear the oil rushing into No. 9, way down below me. True, it would be hours before the tank filled. But long before that I would be overcome by the gas fumes—would fall off the ladder and drown in oil.

"I pictured them finding me when they pumped the oil out again. They might not discover my body for two or three trips! Whatever had happened to that other sailor. Well—that's what I got for working with a drunk."

Again Les shouted for help—and again. He banged feverishly on the side of the tank with his wooden bucket, hoping someone might hear that. But iron ships are always busy—always full of noises. Small hope of attracting attention by making another one.

"By this time," says Les, "the gas had made me sick to my stomach. My lungs felt full of carbon, and my head dull and many times its actual size. Then my mind began to wander. I never smoked opium, but I imagine it makes you think of the same sort of crazy things that I was thinking of then. Don't ask me what they were. I can't remember a single one of them now."

Les doesn't know how long he was down there, but he was in a fog, and slipping off into a coma, when suddenly he heard something creaking directly above him. That brought him out of his stupor, and he strained his ears to listen.

Could it be that someone was coming after him? No. That was out. How could anyone know he was down there? It was just too much to hope for.

But the creaking continued. Les began to recognize it. It was the creaking of a block and tackle—lifting the hatch under which he was imprisoned!

The cover rose. Sunlight streamed in through the opening. Arms reached down and his shipmates hauled him up on deck. Les sat down on the boards—and laughed—laughed like a lunatic—or rather like someone coming out of the gas in a dentist's chair. For that is exactly what Les was doing—coming out from a gassing.

Les still didn't know how in the heck they had managed to find him, and he had to wait till he got over the giggles to ask.

Remember that suit Les sent out to be pressed? Well, that was the life-saver. The tailor had come back with the suit, and he wanted his money. The other boys were broke, so they started looking for Les. They didn't find Les, but they found the lad who had been working with him. He had turned into his bunk to sleep.

When they woke him and asked him where Les was he yawned and said, "Oh, he's down in No. 9."

"And so I was," says Les.

(Tomorrow we're going to hear a great story. And while I'm getting the yarn ready, shoot in that one of your own. In the mean time—fill the think tank!

AUSTEN LAKE

Austen Lake

I FEAR THAT I WILL have to flunk Professor George Owen of M. I. T. for bad scholarship in his smoke-talk that college football coaches use locker-room profanity which would shame a Navy stoke-hole gang. And I trust that the professor's students in naval architecture are less careless with their figures than he is with his facts.

Because, as a football player, reporter and official, I have listened to many coaches' pre-game harangues and, though brisk, with mouth-motions like they were chewing rivets, I have never heard one use the seafaring obscenities that the professor mentions.

I would say rather that the coaches, in late years, have moved to the side of the angels.

And it is common custom among denominational teams to go into hallelujah huddles and dedicate themselves spiritually before scattering for the kickoff. I believe, from long contact with both athletic and academic men, that the coaches are a cleaner-spoken, more wind-blown type of manhood than the professors, and with a deeper sympathy for boyhood problems.

* * *

They Tend Toward the Pious

A FOOTBALL COACH has more reason for stamping and storming than a professor, whose untrammelled life flows in an even channel, with no star scholars being knocked out of classroom lineups from ruptured brain cells on the eve of the Big Game. There are no alumni bigots or newspapers howling because a varsity pupil fumbles his formula or ends his sentences with prepositions.

If the classroom kids fail the professor's instructions, he red pencils their papers, charges them with the defeat and goes home to a quiet lamp-lit evening. But if the football kid misses a tackle on the lip of the goal and loses the Dad's Day game to Porkchop Norman, the coach must eat the kids' mistakes as his own and suffer nervous tantrums and skull bunses. And, unless he goes home, locks himself in his bedroom and stuffs pillows into his mouth to stifle his cusses, the coach is more cursed than cursing.

I would know more about this than Professor Owen, who has his stuff from hearsay and, perhaps, not much of that. I will mark his paper 40 for what he says about some of the colleges whipping the bushes for schoolboy huskies. But I must give him a goose-egg for his shotgun guess on the coaches' blasphemy. And if I had my druthers I would take the coaches and give you the professors.

Suggestion for Trouble

IT SEEMS STRANGE that the anti-Nazi people, who have been blocking American participation in the German Olympics, have lifted no whisper against Max Schmeling's raid on the U. S. boxing funds, and the fact that he, as an endorser of Hitlerism, is going to lift 30 per cent or, possibly, $150,000 of American coin for an hour's restrained activity with Joe Louis next summer.

Of course, Schmeling has suddenly renewed his contract with Joe Jacobs, his Hebrew manager. He did this under duress, after trying vainly to have his end of the purse deposited in a German bank where Jacobs could fix no attachments according to Nazi anti-Semitic law. Yet I recall hearing Jacobs sit on the portico of the Lakeside Hotel at Speculator, N. Y., last September, and weep alcoholic tears about Max's skinflint tricks and refusal to pay legal percentages due. And I will wager that as soon as Schmeling draws his share from the Louis bout, Jacobs will slap a plaster on it for his back pay.

Paths of Virtue

DURING AN HOUR'S SITDOWN with Alabama Pitts, ex-Ossining athlete who is playing basketball at the Arena against the Trojans tonight, he talked freely about his life in the big stone college on the Hudson.

A 180-pound youth with a ruddy glow on his cheek, clear eyes and a quick smile, he referred to his old prison fellows as "inmates," never as convicts. And he talked frankly and freely about his old life, saying that he had added 15 pounds since rejoining society.

There had been no training diet at Sing Sing for the varsity athletes, just the simple rations that went to every man. He had been detailed to nurse the little prison zoo, pets which Warden Lawes had gathered.

No! He never wrote to the inmates, nor received any letters from them. It was forbidden to exchange correspondence between alumni and undergraduates. But he had been back frequently to visit.

"The boys," said he, "are anxious to have my outside life succeed. They seem to think it would reflect on them if anything went wrong."

Next spring, after his basketball campaign, Alabama, who is now 24, will go South with the Albany ball club to Winter Park, Florida. He says he has saved something under $3500 and is forwarding funds to his Mother in Illinois.

War on Football's Rumpots

MAJOR TOPIC DURING the December 26 meeting of the National Collegiate A. A. at New York will be how to quell tipplers of both sexes during football games. One recalls that Dean Christian Gauss of Princeton wrote in a National Weekly last October that "college football crowds have become a gain setting for drunken exhibitionists." It was a prophetic remark, considering that Princeton was the scene of the famous 13th-man incident, and Princeton hordes assaulted the Yale goal posts with the game still in progress.

It is a problem! Several Eastern colleges are considering printing on their face of next autumn's game tickets, "The holder agrees not to import or partake of intoxicants within the premises." A better idea would be to have a squad of prohibition sleuths pat the people's hips as they pass through the portals.

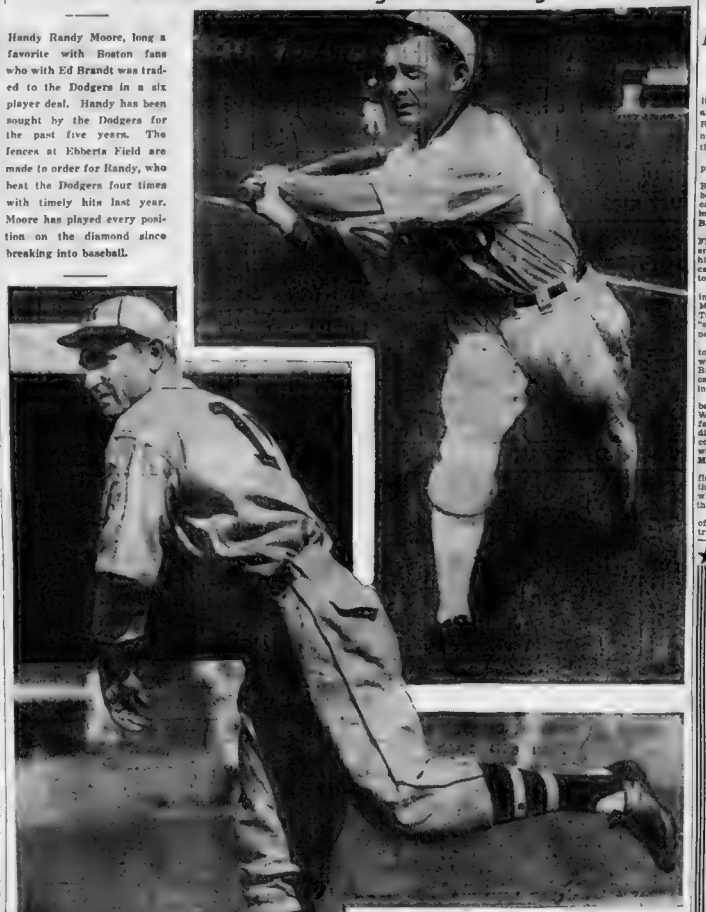
Quinn on Baseball After Dark

AN ENQUIRING REPORTER brusted Bob Quinn in Chicago as he came out of the chamber where he acquired the presidency and debts of the Braves. "What about night baseball?" he enquired. "Humph," said Quinn.

Unless extreme urgency has chanzed his mind, Quinn is a sworn enzmy of night baseball. I have heard him discuss the question often in the time when he needed Red Sox payroll funds worse than Boston's poor children need Christmas baskets (Advt.), and he rejected every suggestion that he install night lights and reap a flood of curious money. I doubt that he will yield to the temptation now to knock the daylight out of baseball.

Two Braves Vets Who Figured in Dodger Deal



Handy Randy Moore, long a favorite with Boston fans who with Ed Brandt was traded to the Dodgers in a six player deal. Handy has been sought by the Dodgers for the past five years. The fences at Ebberts Field are made to order for Randy, who beat the Dodgers four times with timely hits last year. Moore has played every position on the diamond since breaking into baseball.

Big Ed Brandt one of the best southpaws in the National League will wear new livery when the bells sounds for the opening of the National League in April. Brandt has been seeking a change from the Tepee for sometime and close followers of the game look for the big left hander to have a hanner year with the Dodgers.

Both Clubs Benefit in Six Player Transaction

LOPEZ ANSWER TO PRAYER

in baseball in big Ed Brandt, and a versatile jack-of-all-trades in Randy Moore, who has played all nine positions since he broke into the majors.

It is one of those rare deals that promises to benefit both clubs

Ever since McKechnie came to Boston in 1930, the Braves have been sadly in need of a capable catcher. They got one of the best in Lopez, Cuban pepper pot.

BATS .300

Ray Benge, while getting along in years, has long been one of McKechnie's favorites, and the Tribal pilot expects the veteran "spot baller" to prove a big winner at the Wigwam.

Tony Cuccinello, who is slated to be the regular second sacker will add a real punch to the Braves infield. He's a long hitter, capable of parking many a drive into the distant outfield stands.

Bobby Reis' status isn't likely to be settled until spring training. While he looked impressive in his few starts late last season, he didn't work often enough to prove conclusively that he would be a winning pitcher.

MAY BE INFIELDER.

He may turn out to be an infield substitute. That will be something for McKechnie to decide when he puts his boys through their paces at St. Petersburg.

Quinn lives up to his reputation of being a square dealer in this transaction. Brooklyn receives two players who have been sought by several National League clubs for some years.

Ed Brandt, up until last season, had been a consistent winner for several campaigns and rated as one of the three best southpaws in the league. He's also a hitter of note.

It has been felt in Boston baseball circles, however, he has been dissatisfied with his berth on the Braves for some time and had outlived his usefulness here is felt a change of scenery will help him.

DEMON WITH STICK

Randy Moore has been a demon with the stick at Ebbetts Field ever since he joined the Braves. Not a season passed but saw the versatile Texan win three or four games for the Braves at the Flatbush park with drives off the short right field fence.

Randy, a natural .300 hitter is dangerous with the stick in every park, but Brooklyn is his favorite spot.

The Braves may well feel elated over the swap. They receive a great catcher, a steady infielder and a pitcher to offset the loss of Brandt, in addition to a promising prospect in Reis. And with five surviving outfielders they could afford to turn Moore loose.

The Dodgers should feel satisfied. They strengthened their pitching staff and have acquired a slugging outfielder who should go great guns in that town, but Manager Casey-Stengel can't hope to get a catcher of Lopez's class.

MORE DEALS DUE

This deal is believed to be but the first of many which the Braves will negotiate. Now that the front office tangle of the club has been straightened out and there

Bristling action is carded for amateur hockey fans tomorrow night at the Boston Arena with four games scheduled in the Commercial Hockey League. The first game will start at 7 o'clock.

The opening contest will bring together the Monitor A. C. and the Clarendon Hockey Club, representing the John Hancock Co. The Shawmut Bank sextet will clash with the Globe Hockey Club in the second game.

The Owl Hockey Club plays Jackson-Curtis.

MILLER To Invade Mexico

Cincinnati, Dec. 12 (AP)—Freddie Miller, fresh from victory over Claude Varner of Los Angeles, packed his bags today, preparing to go to Mexico City, where New Year's Day he will defend his National Boxing Association world featherweight title against Baby Casanova, crack Mexican puncher.

It will be Miller's first title go since he bested Vernon Cormier in Boston, October 22. Previous to that, Miller retained his championship over Mel Carleton, British contender at Liverpool July 31.

OSTERGARD Brown Captain

Providence, Dec. 12 (AP)—Warren A. Ostergard of Canton, O., and Walter W. Burbank of Larchmont, N. Y., were elected captains of the Brown varsity football and soccer teams today.

Ostergard, a back, has been a regular for two years. He played center on his freshman team but was shifted to the backfield in his sophomore year and immediately won regular standing. The election was unanimous, Ostergard being unopposed.

MARCUM'S LOSS A HEAVY BLOW TO ATHLETIC FANS

Foxx's Cellar Filled With Bludgeons

Jack Conway,
Sports Editor,
Boston Evening American:
Dear Jack:

"Watch Marcum."

That's what the Philly fans pop up with every time I ask them what they think of the trade that sent Jimmy Foxx and Johnny Marcum to Boston.

It seems they gave up hope long ago of having Jimmy with them another season but losing this Kentucky lad, Marcum who won 17 games with a last-end club last season and did some fine pinch-hitting took the props from under them.

A newsboy outside the old Broad street station of the Pennsylvania railroad handed me some interesting statistics. The Boston Sox finished exactly 16½ games behind the pennant-winning Tigers this year and that's half a game less than Johnny put in the satchel for the A's.

Real Fans in City

There are really some dyed-in-the-wool fans here, even if the city doesn't support the clubs very well. But outside of the amazing Mr. Marcum they appear to be taking things in stride, which speaks well for them, when you consider they have all but said goodbye to Cramer and McNair, too, and maybe Pinky Higgins.

Now, in that connection here's something interesting that Jimmy Foxx told me.

I asked him how he figured the Red Sox could use McNair with Manager Joe Cronin playing short—supposing that Tom Yawkey is going to get the Athletics' shortstop, too—and Jimmy remarked that McNair is perfectly capable of playing second, short or third.

"Do you know," he asked me, "that Pinky Higgins never played third base until he came up with the A's? That's not very generally known but it's a fact. Yes, sir, and look at how he plays that corner."

Higgins Worried

Incidentally, Jimy had a letter in his hand from Pinky down in Dallas as he was talking and, while it won't do to say what was in it, I might tell you this much—that Higgins is a bit worried. It seems that this is one of the features of playing ball in Philly. "Hard times are knocking at the door," is a constant refrain at the Shibe Park offices.

Well, Jimmy Foxx' worrying days are over, or so he feels, notwithstanding that three-years contract at about $16,666 per, which he signed only a year ago.

The point is, however, that Jimmy has some other things in mind besides the higher salary which Tom Yawkey is almost certain to grant him, as I see it. Jimmy is a star, you know, as well as being one of the most likeable of young men has in mind certain stipulations that don't go in contracts.

It would not be fair for me to be specific about these but I can say they are not serious and should cause no trouble.

Jimmy took me down in the cellar where I found a dozen Louisville slugger bats, with his signature on them, of course, hanging in a bunch to dry out. I thought of the old song, about the forty-nine blue bottles a-hangin' on the wall, and it occurred to me that these hanging bats hold some sweet songs for the Fenway Park crowds.

Knot Aids Bat

I noticed a knot in one of the bats right at the spot where the bat kisses the ball on one of those drives over the clock out in left field, and I asked the new Sox first-sacker if that spoiled it.

"No sir," said Jimmy, giving his suspenders a lusty snap with both thumbs at once. "That makes the wood all the harder. If you ask me, I think there's a few homers in that particular piece of wood."

These are not Philadelphia-bought war clubs, so James Emory Foxx will not be guilty of treason using them for Boston. He paid for them himself and they are the first of several similar lots which he will wear out before the season ends.

"I may only get one good club out of the dozen," he said, looking fondly at that "stick" with the knot in it.

Hanging up among the rafters, was hanging his mitt and all it needs is a new web before he scoops them out of the dirt of the Fenway.

Trophies in Home

This is a magnificent home that the new Boston star has and the living room where he slumped his 195 pounds in a big easy chair, is adorned with trophies of his career. There's a beautiful clock, the casing of which is made entirely of highly-polished anthracite coal.

There's a lacquer table inlaid with pearls which he brought home from his trip with the American League All-Stars to Japan, a lamp which some artisan made out of a Jimmie Foxx bat and a little model of himself swinging a club, the same bat being picked by the sports writers as the most valuable player in 1932, his banner year.

Naturally talk turned to the Boston fans and Jimmy said he could not speak too highly of them.

"The point is," he said, "they understand the game thoroughly. They show very nearly as much appreciation of a good play by an opponent as by a Boston player. They don't reserve their applause for the home club.

"I have yet to hear the Boston fans boo a home player even when the club was way down, and they stuck right with the team when it was going nowhere in particular.

Game Boom Ahead

"I figure—let me see—well, I'll say 1,500,000 people ought to see us play in Boston next season.

"You know, baseball will pay all over the circuit if Boston, New York, Chicago and Detroit have good clubs. They can carry the rest of us and on that basis it ought to be a fine year for the league.

"The New York fans are fair to us players but it must be taken under consideration that there are a lot of out-of-town people at those games at the Yankee Stadium. The Boston crowds are home crowds, yet they give everybody a square deal."

From Jimmy's home at 9 Wellington road, Jenkintown Manor, he drove me down to Rube Walberg's at 7044 North Broad street, Philadelphia, a distance of only a couple of miles, I'd say. The Rube was tickled to see him and after congratulating him, Rube started comparing notes about hunting.

It turned out that both of them have done some hunting—but no shooting—their luck being off Navy a quail or a duck. But Rube is going gunning again soon and Jimmy is postponing his real fall trip into the fields until the salary matter is settled.

Hits Curve Hard

Jimmy gave the big Red Sox flinching-up twirler a surprise when he remarked that he believed a curve ball could be hit further than a "fast one." Rube said if he hit a curve on a ball it was because it didn't cross the plate at the right height.

"Down there's the spot," said Rube, drawing his hand across his knees.

"Well, I hit a curve of yours over the clock at Fenway," said Jimmy.

"Why," added Rube, "that's the only fun there is out there, getting that curve in the right spot."

Jimmy appeared to remember where every ball came that he clouted for a homer last season, but remarked that it made him feel bad to swing at one right in the groove and put it straight up in the air, then smash a bad one out of the ball park.

Rube told us a lot of stories about homers hit off bad balls, including one that Billy Rogell or Pinky Higgins or somebody smacked right off his shoulders.

Rube Tells Yarn

Then he told another yarn about a big first-sacker out in Columbus who started a doubleheader very much beered-up. Rube pitched against him both games of this twin bill and the beery one got on his star's nerves, his team got only three hits off Rube and he got them all.

"Say, why don't you get warmed up?" he shouted to Rube, who was conspiring freely from 18 innings of exertion.

The moral seemed to be that there is luck in baseball. I reminded them how Homerun Baker, who gave Jimmy his start in baseball down in Maryland, smashed a homer off Rube Marquard in a World Series game back about 1910 and Christy Mathewson's ghost writer the next morning explained that Rube served up the wrong kind of a pitch.

But the very next day Baker hit one out of the park off Matty. Jimmy Foxx said he always insisted that the ghost writer should have anything under his name that he hadn't expressed himself.

Son Proud of Jim

Jimmy made a few references to "getting old" and I told him I saw my first big league game the year before he was born and he frowned at comment about Jimmie Collins, Freddy Parent, Cy Young and Lou Criger, back in 1906.

Jimmie's little son, Jimmy, Jr., was at, permitted in from school before he left his home and he is a miniature of Jimmy, only his dad would not admit it and even got out a picture of Mrs. Foxx to show that the boy looked like her. But he's Jimmy all over. It would do your heart good to see the lad, full of life and very proud of his famous daddy.

Jimmy says he is only six or seven pounds over weight, that is about 193 and keeps in trim by "keeping going all the time"—golfing and hunting and doing everything he can find to do outdoors.

They have such a beautiful home that I really can't blame Mrs. Foxx for not wanting to give it up to establish the family in Boston.

Well, Jack I told you previously how Jimmy promises 50 home runs, 125 runs scored, 200 base hits, 256 runs driven in, a batting average of .350 and 400 total bases next season. The striking part of it was that he had those figures right at the tip of his tongue. You see, he made up his mind some time ago that he was going to do his darndest to have a great year.

But "Watch Johnny Marcum."

So long Jack, and best regards.

Paulino Plans

Orangeburg, N. Y., Dec. 12 (US)—Paulino Uzcudun concluded training today for his meeting with Joe Louis in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night and said:

"Now we'll see how good this Louis is. They seem to think that Paulino is just to be another victim of Louis' stiff punching prowess. Well, that's something I intend to disprove."

Explosion Due

Madison, Wis., Dec. 12—The tempest in the Wisconsin sports teapot, bubbling all fall, apparently was hotter than ever today. It was reported here that Johnny Golembeske, captain-elect of the '36 team, said that Director of Sports Walter Meanwell of Wisconsin had offered him liquor following one of the games this year.

By William Shirer

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Dec. 12—Enough is known about the entrants in the fourth Olympic winter games to be held here in February to enable the local dopesters to predict the winners. Their dope runs like this Skiing—A clean sweep for Norway.

Ice Hockey—Canada or the United States.

Bob Sleigh—America.

For the first time in the experience of the winter games it will be possible for the spectators to take in all the skiing events from one place or, if they wish, from one spot in the elaborate new skiing stadium. The Germans have succeeded in centralizing the whole skiing business.

KONTOFF CUP Goes to Mitchell

The Kontoff Cup, annual award sponsored by Dr. Henry A. Kontoff, Northeastern University physician, has been earned by Richard C. Mitchell of Waltham, 1934 grid captain, it was announced today.

The trophy is awarded each year to an outstanding athlete in the senior class.

Cantersine Tops Opening Race

By Dave Wilson
(Selections Made for Fast Track.)
BEST BET—BORSA

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 12—Borsa was a galloping winner last Saturday. He comes back in the six and one-half furlongs of the fourth race, and any old price will be a good one.

FIRST—CANTERSINE, BEE, RED RIOT

CANTERSINE will win this if able to get postward. BEE is heavily loaded, but figures to take the place from RED RIOT. HOGARTY appears next best.

SECOND—HELEN BAB, FAN, MOVE FASTER

HELEN BAB has only to be kept out of trouble in the run to the first turn in order to win this sprint. FAN, if able to get postward should furnish the contention. MOVE FASTER will have ARDAWN to down for the show award.

THIRD—PRINCE PETTIE, AUSELF, HOT GRIDDLE

PRINCE PETTIE must be rated the day's best bet—that is if Borsa falls to start in the fourth. AUSELF has worked well, and may place and pay boxcar figures. HOT GRIDDLE figures to shut MISS BELIZE out of the picture.

FOURTH—BORSA, GENIE PALATINE, POVEL

If anything runs down BORSA it will likely be GENIE PALATINE. POVEL probably needed last. Anyway, that's my opinion. Therefore I'm taking this one to whip CHAMBERSBURGER for the show honors.

FIFTH—CORNER BOY, BILLOWY WAVE, VIVA PETE

CORNER BOY and BILLOWY WAVE are "also eligibles," but should run as named. If able to get postward, VIVA PETE figures to outlast TIEMPO for the small end of the purse.

SIXTH—FAIRIO, DARK LOVELINESS, LUKE PHANTOM

FAIRIO, if sent back tomorrow, figures slightly best. DARK LOVELINESS has a chance to land the place award. LUKE PHANTOM and SPEAR rate as named.

SEVENTH—INFILEE, SIMPLE SINGER, BUNGALOW

INFILEE was short in last effort. Could win this with a snug ride. SIMPLE SINGER has been pointed for this, but cannot make a single mistake, as BUNGALOW is razor sharp. MISS CATALIN appears next best.

Omaha to Race On English Track

New York, Dec 12 (AP)—William Woodward's Omaha, king of the 1935 three-year-olds, will invade the English turf next year if he has fully recovered from the mysterious ailment that forced his retirement last August.

The stretch-running son of Gallant Fox, which, like his famous sire, won the Kentucky Derby, Preakness, Belmont stakes and the Arlington classic, is doing light work at his owner's Belair stud in Maryland. Even to the expert eye he shows no signs of the ailment that has had his trainer, James Fitzsimmons, and veterinarians guessing since he went lame after winning the class.c.

"He appears perfectly sound," said Tommy Driscoll, foreman of the stable. "Of course he is only being galloped, but I intend to bring him back to Aqueduct December 22 and put him in hard training. Captain C. Boyd-Rochfort, Mr. Woodward's English trainer, will be here to watch the colt and pass on his fitness to race abroad."

Smith Top Seeded Ping Pong Ace

Bob Smith of the Cambridge Ping Pong Club has been top seeded in the men's singles of the Greater Boston tournament slated tomorrow and Saturday at the Western Junior High School, Somerville.

The tournament is open to all residents of Greater Boston and entries may be made until the draw of 128 has been filled. Men's singles, ladies' singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles are the championship events listed.

Home Run Baker Taught Foxx to Hit

By JIMMY FOXX
(As told to Austen Lake)

CHAPTER 3

One of the first things I learned from the old master, Frank Baker, was that cardinal principle of all such successful hitting in any game where a ball is the missile—baseball, golf, polo, squash, racquets, tennis, even ping-pong—"Keep your eye on the ball."

Many a player who would otherwise be qualified for the major leagues has lost his job because he could not hit curve pitching. And that is why so many recruits who burn up the training season games and knock the ball to the four corners of the lot, fade when they come north and the pitchers begin to get their curves in good working order.

Watch Ball

The answer is: they take their eye off the ball about six feet in front of the plate and swing where they think the ball is going to be, but where, when it curves, it is not.

There are some men in the major leagues who have schooled their eyes to follow the ball so closely that they actually prefer a curve to a straight pitch.

Wes Ferrell, the great hitting pitcher of our Red Sox; Mickey Cochrane, my old teammate, who has done such a grand job as manager of the Tigers, and Irving Burns of the Browns, are a few.

Vital Rule

Learning to watch the ball is one of the primer rules of successful hitting. It also is the primer rule of another, and equally important trick; that of learning when not to hit.

"Kid," said Baker one afternoon, after I had hit a pitch that was fully a foot above my head over the fence for a home run, "you don't realize it, but you make a pitcher's job just 50 per cent easier than it would be if you forced him to pitch the way you want him to. You have had only three or four bases on balls this summer. If you wait for the balls you want to hit instead of taking any old thing the pitchers want to give you, you would be hitting .350."

One day just before the end of our 1924 season at Easton—it was the first week in September—Baker came into the hotel with a thick-set, shrewd-faced little man.

Baker had a quizzical, half-humorous look in his eye and I could see something big was in the air.

"Yeh?" I said, my spine feeling as though it was suddenly full of needles.

"Yeh," answered Drennan. "and tonight at 8:15 I'm taking you back to Philly with me to show you a real ball park and a real manager."

is some money available for building purposes, Quinn and McKechnie are determined to start building from the ground up.

Neither of the Boston bosses want to get rid of Wally Berger who is sought by every club but the Giants. But every other player on the team wears a "For Sale" tag.

The deal today indicates that the National League magnates will do their best to put the Warriors back on their feet to offset the tremendous popularity of the Red Sox.

While neither Quinn or McKechnie promise any more deals during the meeting, it is reported the Pirates are angling for Hal Lee and that the Cubs are interested in Pitcher Freddie Frankhouse and Shortstop Billy Urbanski.

Something may come of these bids in the near future.

All-Irish Team Wins

Emulating the feat the Irish accomplished against Ohio State, the All-Notre Dame eleven converted defeat into victory in the final minute of the spectacular indoor grid game at the Boston Garden, taking a 10 to 9 verdict over the All-Eastern Collegiates, before 10,000 fans.

Although the game was practically void of vicious tackling and blocking, due to the narrowness of the playing surface, it was an interesting exhibition, which Jim Leonard climaxed with a peacement goal, with Notre Dame trailing, 8 to 7 with less than a half minute to go.

RUDOLPH Scores Second VICTORY

New York, Dec. 12 (AP)—Four of the ten players in the world's pocket billiards championships were on even terms today with two victories each, and a fifth was with them in the undefeated class with one triumph.

Erwin Rudolph of Cleveland, who won the title a year ago and subsequently lost it to the absent Andrew Ponzi in a challenge match, hung up his second straight victory yesterday as did two Philadelphians, George Kelly and Willie Mosconi, and young Jimmy Caras of Wilmington, Del.

Frank Taberski of Schenectady, N. Y., dropped behind when he remained idle after winning his first contest, but he had the first opportunity today to catch up.

It was winner against loser in each of the day's four contests Taberski was to open the afternoon program against Pasquale Natalie of Chicago, who has lost once; then Caras was to meet Marcel Camp of Detroit.

Louis Names Sixth for Paulino's Exit

$125,000 GATE PREDICTED

New York, Dec. 12 (AP)—Joe Louis, the slickest piece of fighting machinery since Jack Dempsey was riding high, 15 years ago, is confident he will stop Paulino Uzcudun in six rounds or less when they meet in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

One of the largest indoor fight crowds in history is assured. It looks like a sell-out and that means approximately 20,000 people will be squeezed into the Garden. A capacity house will bring a gate of around $120,000 or $125,000.

Interest in the 15-round event is surprising considering that Louis is a top-heavy favorite. The Garden has requests for more than 300 press reservations from out of town.

Respect Paulino

What money is being wagered favors the young Negro, making his 26th professional start, to score a decisive victory well under ten rounds, but not to send the 36-year-old Spaniard down for the count.

Paulino has fought in this country on numerous occasions and fight followers have a wholesome respect for his sturdy jaw. In 65 ring battles, the woodchopper has never been jolted from his feet.

Louis has won 21 of his 25 pro victories with sleep producers. His managers and trainers see no reason why his dynamite-laden fists should not continue the knockout parade against Paulino. You can get even money in the Louis camp there will be at least one knockdown.

"Every time Joe has fought he has met and whipped somebody a little tougher than the man before," said John Roxborough, one of the Bomber's managers. "He was better against Max Baer than he was against Primo Carnera. And he'll be better against Paulino. We'll bet there's at least one knockdown. Joe says he's going to knock him out."

Spaniard Surly

Up at Orangeburg, Paulino, a bit surly, much to the delight of his trainers, was equally confident. The Spaniard never has believed Louis is a super fighter.

Paulino says one punch to the right spot can beat the colored lad, The Basque is predicting a victory; but he's promising that he will not be knocked down.

"Too many hard hitters have tried here," he said, pointing to his jaw. "Baer, Schmeling, George Godfrey—lots of them."

ALTER Baseball Schedule

Chicago, Dec. 12—Major League baseball magnates voted to alter the intersectional series plan whereby each club plays at the park of each rival club on "4-3-3" game basis. Next season each team will make four trips on a "2-3-3-3" arrangement. They estimate the change means each club will average an additional 2000 miles of travel each season.

SILVER SKATES DERBY BIG HIT, ANN FINDS

SKATING AIDS BEAUTY, ANN LEARNS FROM CHAMP

N.E. Fete Is Best Ever

SKATING REAL BEAUTY AID

By Ann Marsters

It's almost unbelievable, but it's true. Never before has there been such immediate response to any Silver Skates Derby as there has to this one.

(By "this one" I mean the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser Silver Skates Derby which will be held on January 26.)

It was Irving Jaffee who told me so—and he should know. The Derby was announced only three days ago and already Jaffee has a huge bundle of entry blanks (all filled in) on his desk—and the bundle mounts higher and higher. Jaffee, who is recognized as the world's champion speed skater, has directed many a Silver Skate Derby in Chicago and New York, and he said:

"I've never seen anything like the enthusiasm that this New England event has aroused. It's sure to be even a greater success than we expected.

Big Race Chance

"New England is going to love it. And just think of all the amateur skaters, from the very wee up to the very big, who've never had a chance to really display their talent in competition, until this came along. We'll probably find some potential Olympic champions among them."

Jaffee himself made his start in Silver Skates Derby competition. And he went on to carry the banner of America up to the heights of skating supremacy—outspeeding all those "natural born" skaters who come from Norway and Sweden.

They used to call him the "hot house skater," for he learned on an indoor rink in the middle of New York city—on Broadway, at that. And he didn't begin to skate until he was 16 years old. (He's been skating for just ten years.)

He knows just about all there is to know about this sport, and he can tell you (if you don't already know it) that skating is the oldest sport in the world.

Skaters in 680 B. C.

"Way back in 680 B. C.," he said, "people used to make skates out of animal bones.

"Later it became the exclusive sport of European royalty. Up until 1800, only kings and queens (and their relatives) were known to put on a pair of skates. But in the year 1805, a Scandinavian, named Hagen, invented an inexpensive skate—one that could be clamped onto your shoes.

"Today there are about five million pairs of skates sold every year in the United States alone."

"If a woman wants to be beautiful—and what woman doesn't—if she wants to have a fine complexion and a beautiful figure, she should take up skating.

"It's the surest way there is to acquire grace and suppleness. The benefits of skating and dancing are similar, but skating gives you the added benefit of fresh air.

Sociable Sport

"And skating," Jaffee continued, "is such a pleasant, sociable sport.

"The etiquette of a skating rink is very different from that of a ballroom. It's considered quite proper for a strange young man to say to a girl, 'May I have this skate? And it's equally proper for the girl to accept.

"At one of the skating rinks in New York, the management offered to give a wedding present to all couples who could prove that their romance began at that particular rink. By the end of the season, they had given away 30 wedding presents.

"Oh, yes, I would advise all women to learn to skate."

Jaffee, by the way, gave us an exhibition of his own skating ability—and it was quite the most breath-taking thing to watch that you can imagine.

On January 26, at the Silver Skates Derby, he will give the spectators an idea of how he happens to hold so many skating records—including the world's one mile record and the five-mile record. He will attempt to break the world's half-mile record.

RACING TUBES BIG AID TO SKATER

This is the third of a series of articles on ice skating by Irving Jaffee, holder of three Olympic championships and the world's professional title, designed to aid all entrants in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser Silver Skates Derby, to be held at a Boston park location on Sunday, January 26. Readers wishing to obtain any additional information write to Irving Jaffee, Boston American and Sunday Advertiser, and it will be answered in Jaffee's columns.

By Irving Jaffee

Look at an expert's tools, whether they pertain to working or sports, and you can judge his ability.

Since speed skating requires co-ordination at a minimum of effort, it is of utmost importance that skaters have the best, properly designed, skating outfits.

If there is one handicap you can avoid, it is the seeing to it that you have the right type skates, so you will only have to concentrate on how to develop form and speed.

Naturally in order to make great speed on ice, a longer, speed type of tubular blade is the skate to use. While hockey skates are also adaptable to speed, the shortness of their blades will make it impossible to keep up your locomotion and speed for any great distance.

6 Laps to Mile

The Silver Skates Derby and most other national skating races are held on a six laps to a mile track and in order to make any real time and stay in front, the longer type blade makes it easier, since you will then be able to take long strides, conserving energy for the finish.

When boys get fitted for a skate shoe, they always take the same size as street shoes. Girls should order a half size smaller than street shoes. Always be sure that you have a nice snug fitting shoe, glove like and with no ankle supports which bind the legs.

Oil Shoes

Drop a little thin oil on your shoes occasionally, to soften them and avoid their cracking when getting wet. If you wear three to six, girls' or boys' shoe, use a fourteen inch length blade; from six to eight and a half, a fifteen inch blade; from eight and a half size or larger, use fifteen and half or sixteen inch blade.

Wear a thin, pure wool sock and loose clothing.

Summation: Get good, proper fitting skates and loose, comfortable clothes and the rest of it is up to your skating ability.

Tomorrow, how to develop form for speed.

OWEN BLASTS PRESS

College Boy Editors Slapped

Professor George Owen, of the department of naval architecture at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, storm center of a nationwide protest after his recent criticism of "professionalized college football," today unloosed a blast at the Harvard Crimson and Yale News.

"The editorial writers of these college publications are merely boys with no background," he stated.

"They have to let off steam. No one pays any attention to their adolescent remarks anyway. Real intelligence comes only with age and experience.

"The Yale News alludes to me as an insanity case. The chances are they're right. For aren't we all?

"You know the old story about the fellow who considered everybody crazy except himself? That about sizes up the present situation."

MISINTERPRETED

"But there is one thing I should like to clear up. It is a point on which I think my remarks were entirely misinterpreted.

"I want to go on record as having every reason to believe that the present football regimes at both Harvard and Yale are above reproach.

"Normal intelligence would indicate that the Crimson had no bought players this past year. Its record proves that.

"Whatever allusions I made to Harvard dated back to the days when my son played there, and long before that.

"As far back as the early nineties, it was quite the common thing to slip the football players something on the side.

HARD-BOILED

"Bob Fisher, under whom my son played, was a disciple of the Haughton school.

"The same was true at Princeton in the days of Bill Roper.

COMPTOM CALM

"President Compton wired Ohio State in answer to their telegram demanding that I prove my statements," said Professor Owen. "The contents of his message I choose to divulge.

"It looks as though someone's corpus ate darn sore. When a plain little, ordinary fellow like me expressing a few observation, finds his name emblazoned in headlines three inches deep with one after another college putting me on the spot.

"One New Haven newspaper wired me asking the cost of a 500-word story. But I refused to consider it. I won't be drawn any further into controversy.

"All I will say is that I still insist that colleges should come out into the open and pay their athletes in return for their valuable services. There is no disgrace in capitalizing on one's ability when done openly."

Ex-Eaglets Star With B. C. Six

Boston College High with five of its products on the hockey team is carrying on its tradition as an incubator for future Eagle athletes.

On the first line with Captain Fred Moore and Peter Murphy, is Dick McDonald, who played for B. C. High.

WILSON To See Son Play

Dallas, Tex. (AP)—Robert Wilson figured that "circumstances" wouldn't permit him to see his famous son, Bobby, play for Southern Methodist against Stanford in the Rose Bowl, but he failed to remember how many friends and S. M. U. fans there were in his home town of Gladewater.

They called a meeting and contributed funds for the trip.

GLENNA To Play Abroad

Pinehurst, N. C., Dec. 12 (AP)—Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, national women's golf champion, plans another try next summer for the British women's title which eluded her in previous attempts. She expects to sail in April to take part in the Curtis Cup International women's team matches at Gleneagles, Scotland, and the British championship.

Just a moment—read this sensational No-Risk Offer that has taken the whole state by storm!

Get a tin of Prince Albert. Smoke 20 pipefuls of P.A. If you don't say you've had the best smokin' ever, return the tin with the rest of the tobacco in it, and we will refund your full purchase price, plus postage.

You Be the Judge

The risk is all on us. Prince Albert has to satisfy you. And we believe it will. For we use only choice, ripe, mild tobacco. Then it is "crimp cut" for slow burning and cool smoking. All "bite" is removed to make it absolutely certain that Prince Albert is mild and delicate in taste.

There's no skimping on quantity, either. We pack enough tobacco for 50 ordinary pipefuls in the big 2-ounce economy tin.

So it's little wonder that men are flocking to Prince Albert. "The National Joy Smoke," that is backed up by such a fair and square offer as we have made.

Having read the offer, act now. For your own sake, you should know what the difference is!

OUR OFFER TO PIPE SMOKERS:

Smoke 20 fragrant pipefuls of Prince Albert. If you don't find it the mellowest, tastiest pipe tobacco you ever smoked, return the tin with the rest of the tobacco in it to us at any time within a month from this date, and we will refund full purchase price, plus postage.

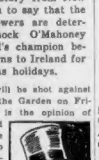
Danno Promoters' Target

By JACK CONWAY

DANNO O'MAHONEY, who only recently won a victory over the immigration authorities, won't fare so well in his future mat contests, according to an Associated Press dispatch from New York. The story from New York goes on to say that the wrestling powers are determined to knock O'Mahoney off as world's champion before he returns to Ireland for the Christmas holidays.

Ray Steele will be shot against O'Mahoney at the Garden on Friday night. It is the opinion of Tom Packs, Ed White and the Western group of mat promoters that Steele will pin the O'Mahoney.

They point to the fact Steele held O'Mahoney to a draw in a one-hour time limit match in St. Louis. Ray Lister pinned King Levinsky in 30 seconds in a mixed bout between a wrestler and a boxer.



Mr. Boston

Packs and other Western promoters would like to pit Steele against Joe Louis in a mixed bout. A win over O'Mahoney would give the proposed mixed contest the proper build up especially if the "Brown Bomber" can go on to win Jimmy Braddock's title. It would be a meeting of champions.

If Steele should fail to win from O'Mahoney, Jack Curley will try to perform this feat with Ed Don George carrying his best wishes in the New York Garden on next Monday night. General John Phelan, the power in the New York Athletic Commission, is one of George's chief supporters. He didn't like the tactics O'Mahoney used as he won from George in their last bout in New York. He claims Danno punched George to the canvas,

• • •

WAR ON CHAMP

THE champion in all forms of sports is always the target for everybody. I find the public would also like to see O'Mahoney pinned. Danno's run of 152 straight victories has become a bit monotonous. You are likely to find many fans rooting for Steele to win from O'Mahoney at the Garden tomorrow night.

When Danno first started wrestling in Boston, you would have risked your life if you had openly rooted for his opponent.

Jack McGrath, O'Mahoney's manager, knows there is an organized move to defeat Danno. He says the young Irishman has met all comers successfully to date, and that he will continue to do so. McGrath, however, will take the precaution to bar hostile referees. He has had enough experience in the mat game to know that a referee could give Danno's opponent a rolling fall.

LOUIS READY

"Bomber" Joe Louis isn't worrying about the outcome of his 15-round bout with Paulino in the New York Garden tomorrow night. Louis is confident he will win by a knockout inside of ten rounds.

Louis has been at Pompton Lake, N. J., for almost three weeks and is in excellent condition. He has been boxing steadily and knows he can travel at top speed every second he is in the ring.

Louis will set his own pace, and is certain to get inside of Paulino's defense with his crushing hooks and jabs. I saw Max Schmeling hand Paulino a crushing defeat in a 15-round bout in New York seven years ago, and the Basque has gone back since then. Schmeling used a left hand to cut Paulino down. It took Max ten rounds to slow the Basque down. From then on he made a chopping block of the Basque. Paulino could not see when he left his corner at the opening of the 15th round. He seized Schmeling in a clinch and held on for most of the round. He was a pitiful sight when the contest ended.

I am glad to hear Paulino will receive a guarantee of $30,000 for his tussle with Louis. The purse will help him forget the licking he will receive.

There is considerable interest in the appearance of Jack Gibbons of St. Patrick in one of the preliminary bouts. He is a son of the famous Mike Gibbons and a nephew of Tom Gibbons. The boy has his dad's boxing class and expects to go a long way up the fistic trail.

AL McCOY has returned to Boston from Montreal, where he handed a decisive defeat to Bob Olin, former world's light heavyweight champion, in a ten-round bout. McCoy got the bad break of not securing his crack at Olin while the latter was titleholder.

McCoy will receive an opportunity to win both the New England light heavyweight and heavyweight titles at the Garden a week from tomorrow night. Al won't have to make weight for Tony Shucco and should have all of his strength

FIGURE SKATING

COSTLY PRIZE LIST NAMED

By Will Connell

A standout prize list helps make the Gala Skaters' Frolic at the Boston Arena on Saturday night the top affair of its kind this year.

The Frolic is under the auspices of the Olympic Skating Club and is run for the Boston American-Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund.

Queen Event

The special events include the Queen of the Frolic crowning. The "Queen" contestants, to be attired in sports or business clothing, skate on the Arena ice singly. The winner will be awarded a beautiful fur jacket, donated by Scott Furriers, Winter street, Boston.

Two-pound boxes of Viva chocolates, donated by Edgar P. Lewis and Sons, will be awarded all winners of skating races.

Hand Bag Award

Best looking costume event, for the man winner, a pair of shoe skates, donated by South End Hardware, and a beautiful hand bag, donated by London Harness Co., Franklin street, Boston, for the woman.

Second prize, most unique man's costume, a Norman fighter, donated by Washington Jewelry Co., Boston; and for the woman, three pairs of silk stockings, donated by Touraine Glove Co., Boston. Seconds, best looking man's costume, a smoking stand from Kane Furniture Co., and for the woman, a box of Viva chocolates.

Silver cups for first in the races, and medals for second and third are other attractive awards.

BELT FINALS At Arena Monday

The Irish American A. A. is all ready for the Diamond Belt finals to be staged at the Boston Arena next Monday night. This event will bring together the winners of four tryout tourneys in 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 and 175 pounds classes.

Frolic

Ticket Sale on At 3 Offices

Ticket sale continues at a rapid pace for the Gala Skaters' Frolic at the Arena on Saturday night, for the Christmas Basket Fund. Tickets are priced 40 cents for general admission, 75 cents, $1.10 and $1.65 for reserved seats.

Tickets are on sale at the Boston Garden, Boston Arena, and Christmas Basket Fund Headquarters, 294 Devonshire street, just off Summer street, Boston.

Big N. H. L. Trades Expected Soon

By Bill Grimes

Since the opening week of the N. H. L. season, Smiling Jack Adams of the Detroit Red Wings has been flaunting $10,000 at Owner Ernie Savard of Les Canadiens for Wilfie Cude, the goal minder for the Flying Frenchmen.

The syndicate, headed by Savard, which bought out Leo Cattarinich and Leo Dandurand has some outstanding notes to meet in the near future. Les Canadiens are not drawing well in the Forum. Therefore, the new owners could use $10,000 to great advantage, while the acquisition of Cude would materially benefit the Wings.

But, the Canadiens' new owners have turned deaf ears on Adams' proposition.

Karakas Star

Mike Karakas may be the solution of the Detroit-Canadiens controversy. Karakas, an American, born in Eveleth, Minn., has been a sensation in the nets for the Chicago Blackhawks. He was signed to act as extra goalie, but was immediately drafted into service when Lorne Chabot, the veteran Chi goale, came up with a torn cartilage.

Chabot in ready for action but the Chihawks are leading the American Division and Mike Karakas has held his opponents to 14 goals in 11 games. Manager Clem Loughlin is not entertaining any thoughts of replacing the rookie.

Considering the pressure James Norris, Jr., owner of the Red Wings and majority stock holder of the Chicago Stadium could bring to bear, it's just possibly that a gigantic trade is in the making involving the Detroit, Chicago and Canadiens clubs. Providing, of course, Mike Karakas continues to kick out pucks labeled goals until the deal can be consummated.

Want French Six

Les Canadiens are trying to "ice" an all French team. Lorne Chabot is a Frenchman a product of Montreal. He was sold, along with Howie Morenz to Chicago a year ago by Leo Dandurand and upon the departure of these stars the Canadiens' fans started to become conspicuous by their absence.

For more than a year, the Canadiens enthusiasts, who are the most loyal of all followers of hockey, have been demanding that Chabot and Morenz be brought back to Montreal.

With Chebot as bait, the Detroit Red Wings might negotiate a deal whereby Wilfie Cude would return to Jack Adams, under whom he played while on loan, from the Canadiens a few years ago, and Norm Smith transfer to Chicago as a spare goalie.

And, while on the subject of trades, Howie Morenz has never been satisfied with his surroundings in Chicago and would like to shake himself loose from the Windy City. The Blackhawks could be prevailed upon to dispense with Morenz if the right player was offered in the swap.

Now Major McLaughlin has always greatly appreciated Cooney Weiland's ability and there's little doubt but that if the Bruins would trade Cooney for Morenz, he'd acquiesce.

Although he has been the outstanding forward in the N. H. L. for more than a decade, there's still plenty of pep in hockey left in Morenz. Under satisfactory playing conditions and with a club like the Bruins, Howie Morenz would be rehabilitated and Manager Frank Patrick would have a great getting, smart, two way and absolutely fearless center at his disposal.

MAT CARNIVAL At Boys' Club

A diversified program of bouts will feature the Wrestling Carnival of the Boys' Clubs of Boston next Wednesday night at the Eben D. Jordan Memorial Gymnasium, Charlestown.

Among the stars who will compete are Dick Johnson, Tufts captain and Dick Steward, 165-pound college champion; Walter Whalen, 175-pound Club champion vs. John Whelan; Nat Neville vs. "Red" Breen, 160-pound Club contestant, and others.

Now on Court

PITTSMEN At Arena

Although only 25, he has had more than his share of grief including a five-year stretch at Sing Sing, but that is now a thing of the past and he is out to secure a livelihood through the medium of sports.

He is now in Boston to appear at the Arena with his All Stars to battle the Trojans in a pro basketball clash this evening.

"I feel that I can make a good living as a professional athlete," says Pitts.

"This basketball team I am with should make money. I have already banked over $2000 since the football season started.

"I also want everybody to know that I am extremely grateful to the sports public throughout the country. I have been treated marvelously. My unfortunate mistake of the past has never been held against me."

BOYS' CLUB Plays Winchendon

The Boys' Clubs of Boston, Charlestown District will open their basketball season Saturday night when the senior team meets the Winchendon Boys' Club at the Eben D. Jordan Memorial Gymnasium, Charlestown.

Lou Holtz Returns To Vallee Radio Hour

By N. F. T.

Loudspeaker patrons who like the Lou Holtz line of dialect comedy will relish this word that Lou is being worked back into the Rudy Vallee broadcasting scheme of things.

He returns tonight during the latter's well known dial visitation (WEEI), between 8 and 9 o'clock.

Holtz held forth for a long time with Vallee. His emphasis on the phrase, "My Fra-a-and," of his own coining, caused that expression to find its way into high society, and lower strata conversation in every city and countryside community worth mentioning on the map. Lou promises a new humor for this evening, which is particularly pleasing news, most of his regular run of gag-gab having been heard at some time or another while he was serving Rudy before.

What has marked merit and is likely to prove decidedly worth listening to, is the local Christmas Carol half hour (WAAB), due this evening, as arranged by the choir of the Perking Institution for the Blind of Boston. It will occupy the 7:45 to 8:15 30 minutes, with "Sleep Holy Babe" to be one of the featured solemn selections.

• • •

Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, national chairman of the American Red Cross, will be guest speaker on the "To Arms for Peace" program (WNAC) this evening from 8:30 to 9.

Admiral Grayson is a noted surgeon and was President Wilson's personal physician. In October he received the Order of Honor and Merit from the Cuban Red Cross for the aid and advice he gave to that body.

An unusually thorough inspection of the Municipal Airport at East Boston and its manifold activities was provided recently for 24 of the 35 members of the Flying Hawks squadron, one of the most alert Junior Birdmen flight units in the public schools.

"Thanks to Captain Albert E. Edson, superintendent of the field, and Mrs. Mary A. Herbert, the hostess, we saw everything there was to see and much that escapes the casual visitor," was the enthusiastic report of Miss Esther M. Larson, teacher of Eighth grade geography and John Winthrop school, Dorchester, and sponsor of the pupils' squadron.

The Flying Hawks, commanded by Morris Landy, Dorchester, were met in newspaper wonder through all of the hangars as they absorbed a great supply of information on various types of military and commercial planes, aids to navigation, duties of pilots, mechanics and officials and on other phases of aeronautics.

"I was as interested as my pupils," Miss Larson said, "and I don't know how I could have done a better deed on my day off."

Another group at John Winthrop school, envious of the good times the Flying Hawks are having and desiring to share in the aviation knowledge they are acquiring, have begged Miss Larson to help them form a Junior Birdmen squadron.

John A. Hamman, 370 Amory street, Jamaica Plain, and John Lanczcki, 287 Park street, Lawrence, the latest members of the Boston American Wing to enter the Sikorsky S-39 scale model building competition which closes at Easter time to wing winners. The national winner will receive $1000 in cash, Headline for entry in this contest is January 1.

MOVIE MIXUPS

BY ART MOGER

New faces vs. old favorites!

Today's lineup of Hollywood stars include many new players as they appear at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters in "Coronado" and "Charlie Chan's Secret." How many do you know? Unscramble their names from the mixed up letters near their cartoon likenesses and mail your entire week's solutions to: The Movie Mixups Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass.

Forty new 1936 Automatic Tom Thumb radios with all new improvements, made in New England by the Automatic Radio Mfg. of Boston; $150 in cash and 200 theater ticket awards are to be distributed free by the Boston Evening American.

A special grand award, to be given away from the stage of the Boston Opera House on Monday, December 30, by celebrities in the new Ziegfeld Follies of 1936, is the nine all metal tube, all wave Automatic Console radio with 20 features including "Vision Ray," radio's most outstanding mechanism.

3 Bids and Proposals

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS
The Commonwealth of Massachusetts
Department of Mental Diseases
National Industrial Recovery Project, Mass. State No. M-32, PWA Docket No. 5564, NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed proposals for Turbo-Generator and Switchboard Equipment for Power Plant at Foxborough State Hospital, Foxborough, Mass., will be received by the Department of Mental Diseases, Room 1017, State House, Boston, Mass., until 2 P. M., E. S. T., on Wednesday, December 18, 1935, at which time they will be publicly opened and read. Bids must be submitted on the Department's prescribed special form or of contract for project and specifications constructed under the terms of the National Industrial Recovery Act and Chapter 392 of the Massachusetts Acts of 1933, to which is attached and made a part thereof the Special Contract Provisions Revised April 15, 1935, of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works and the State Labor and Industries Contract Provisions.

Attention is called to the fact that the schedule of wages to be paid to skilled mechanics employed on work on this project by the Labor and Industries under the provisions of Section 26 of the Acts of 1935 is annexed to the contract documents.

Plans, specifications and contract form may be obtained at Room 305, Ford Bldg., 15 Ashburton Place, Boston, upon a deposit of amount of $50.00. This amount is to be returned to the estimating bidder's checks but that of each general bidder will be returned upon return of the plans and specifications in good condition. Checks must be made payable to the Commissioner of Mental Diseases. Bidders may be seen at the office of the engineers, Metcalf & Eddy, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Bids must be accompanied by properly certified check on or certificate of deposit issued by a responsible bank or trust company in the amount of $1000.00 made payable to the Commissioner of Mental Diseases. Checks and certificates will be returned after execution of the contract and bond demand. A surety bond by an approved surety company will be required from the successful bidder in the amount not less than 50% of the contract price. The right is reserved to reject any and all proposals, or to accept any proposal deemed best for the Commonwealth, and no award can be made without the approval of the Acting Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Emergency Works Commission.

No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of thirty days after the date set for the opening thereof.

The local registration office of the National Reemployment Service, where persons employed in the work contemplated by the Special Contract Provisions Revised April 15, 1935 of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works will be referred, is the Unemployment Service Post Office Building, Boston.

Department of Mental Diseases,

Reaffirm State Rights!

THE forty-first annual conference of the National Municipal League, recently in session at Providence, R. I., contained the germ of an excellent suggestion in one of its resolutions:

"CLOSER CO-OPERATION AMONG STATES AGAINST EFFORTS OF THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT TO ABSORB MORE OF THEIR FUNCTIONS."

This is the proper moment for a call for a convention of the governors of the 48 sovereign States of this Union to once more define and reaffirm in NO UNCERTAIN TONES their constitutional rights.

Since the advent of the Roosevelt administration the shadow of centralized Federal absorption of State rights has lengthened until today there is a threat of "COMPOUNDING US IN A COMMON MASS," which Chief Justice Marshall warned us against.

One warning after another by the Supreme Court has failed to stay the effort of this Socialistic administration to obliterate State lines in the interest of a seamless regimented America.

One of the leading factors in the causes of the American revolution was the continuous efforts of George III and his advisers to wipe out colony-boundaries and knead us into one lump.

The men who made the Constitution provided against this catastrophe which they knew would threaten their "posterity" by defining precisely the rights of the States and guarding them against the incursions of just such acts and measures that have threatened their sovereignty under the state-raiding Roosevelt regime.

Therefore it is the definite, psychological moment for a solemn conclave of the STATES of these United States to boldly face the contemplated usurpation of their constitutional rights and powers by the most REACTIONARY administration that this country has ever lived under.

If all the States stand UNITED ON THE CONSTITUTION in militant challenge to this threat against their lives, the engulfing shadow of federal absorption will pass away like a bad dream.

A mass is no greater than the sum of the units that compose it. These units—the 48 States—should be called in council at the capital of the nation this Winter to make plain to the collectivists in power that the name of this country is still the United STATES of America.

Remember Will Rogers

Saturday is Tag Day in Greater Boston for the Will Rogers Memorial. It will be observed also in many New England cities and towns.

Aviation, the industry the great sage-humorist loved, will honor him with a squadron of army, navy and commercial planes which will fly over Boston and soar west as far as Worcester.

And men, women and children—ordinary folks whom Will loved best of all—will remember him by donating to the fund that will perpetuate his memory for all time.

Can Accomplish Much

The gift of $2,000,000 by Lucius N. Littauer of New York to Harvard for creation of a new Graduate School of Public Administration can be of immeasurable service to the United States.

Competent men and women are needed in every branch of government. Their presence means the difference between efficiency and inefficiency.

Banks Are Safer

It would seem impossible that in this day and age there is an American woman who believes it is safer to carry a large sum of currency hidden in her clothes than to keep the money in a bank.

From her experience Mrs. Cunningham will no doubt learn that banks nowadays are SAFE, immeasurably SAFER than hiding places in her clothing.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Listen World—

For the last 20 years there's been a constant discussion about The American Home. Why has it gone on the rocks? Each debater has his own theory and cure. Some of them are exasperating.

Elsie Robinson

For instance, there's a large tribe who think everything would be ducky again if we could all live in big, rambling, country houses, with acres and acres between the front verandas, pigeons in the dove cote and pies cooling on the pantry window sill. A delightful picture, but clearly asinine.

Congestion — with the inevitable competition—has inevitably put big, rambling, country houses in the same class with stone-age caves and tent dwellings. Moreover, most bakery pies are cheaper and better than the kitchen variety. (Not mine! If you think that I'm ever going to admit that any bakery can beat me at pie-making, you're crazy!)

OLD HOME PASSE

However, as I was saying— and as you well know unless you're completely goofy—the Dear Old-Fashioned variety of Home is DOOMED. Nothing short of a miracle can bring it back to this congested and complicated modern world.

Then, there's another class who blame Transportation.

Transportation, they say, is responsible for all this wildness. If we didn't have all these automobiles! But that, too, is piffle. Human brains being what they are, automobiles were likewise inevitable.

The largest class, of course, blame it on The Kids themselves. They think that right-minded youngsters should voluntarily band themselves together at the age of six and vow to forthwith resist the devilish lures of all movies, silk stockings, cigarettes, flivvers, roadhouses, dance halls, one-piece swimming suits, necking parties, hip flasks and make-up kits.

Meanwhile permitting their elders to manufacture and sell said commodities and run said institutions for their enormous personal profit.

A cute idea! And just about as reasonable as asking an omelet to speak French.

PARENTS TO BLAME

Personally, I'm for hanging the blame on the Paper and Mamas themselves. The American Home has gone on the rocks—according to my notion—largely because parents refuse to accept the role.

It would matter comparatively little whether we lived in farm houses or apartments, traveled in ox-carts or limousines, if the two people who were responsible for the home faced that responsibility.

A father's attitude toward his family has altered relatively little—but a mother's has altered enormously. The average modern mother is obsessed with the necessity of keeping herself young and enjoying her youth while she has it.

She honestly believes that she has made a brilliant success of her motherhood if, at 35, she is mistaken for her daughter's sister. (Daughter's opinion on this subject is frequently unprintable.)

It is simply impossible to be a full time mother and yet look 16 at 36. Moreover, no female with her full quota of sense would want to. Nor is it possible to have a full time career and do right by your home.

Yes, I know—you've 1937 smart arguments to refute that, sister. But don't try them on me. I'm a mother myself and I know what I'm talking about. The American Home has gone on the rocks, gals, because we've been too busy serving ourselves to keep it off!

Isn't It So?

A still tongue makes a wise head.

When a girl marries a man who has plenty of money to burn, the world generally calls that a good match.

Dear Mr. Farley:

This here letter is full of Happy News, that is if you're a Democrat. Club in my state that looks like it will go 100 per cent Roosevelt in 1936.

The way I found out about it was takeing a walk yesterday, a very nice Gentleman ronch his head over a fence & says, "My Friend," he says, "do you want to join our Club?"

"Yes," I says, "what kind of a club is it?"

He says it was a club where they work out Plans to bring back Prosperity, so I asked him how they was going to do it.

His eye begun to gleam, & he says, "We will plow under a lot of Pigs & Potatoes, so as to get rid of the Food Surplus that people used to eat."

"But wait, my Friend! We are says, "the Govt already done it."

He grabbed aholt of my arm throuch the fence, & he says, but wait, my Friend! We are going farther than that, we will get rid of the Surplus of everything. We will take the Silver Surplus & pound it back in the rocks, we will beat Eggs back into the Hens," he says, "and as for the Wool Surplus, we will unravvel it from Socks & glue it back on the Sheep!"

I seen where his Plan would take the AAA Program straight to where it was heading for, so I says to him, "My Friend, your plan is wonderful, what is the name of your Club?"

He give me a happy smile, and he says, "The official name of this here club is Ira Staats Aylum," he says, "and I am the president, my name is Napoleon."

It turned out he really was Napoleon, because just then the Keeper come up & says, "Napoleon, the Royal Supper Il served," & he led him away by the hand.

Mr. Farley, that gentleman hadn't ought to be where he is, he ought to be where you are, working for the Govt, because there isn't anything Crazy about his Plan, it is only just a sign farther from what the New Deal already done.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Dec. 12—Two of the world's cleverest men met at a luncheon at the Plaza the other day. They are the aces of the cryptographic profession—Major Herbert O. Yardley and Captain Georges Painvin. They had not met since the exciting days of the world war.

O. O. McIntyre

In deciphering and decoding secret messages, Major Yardley was conceded supreme by experts in Paris, London and Rome. He reconstructed jumbled cablegrams in Japanese and Russian without knowing a word of either language. Afterward he wrote his famous book, "The American Black Chamber."

It told of state secrets and methods so important that an act of Congress was passed to prevent its circulation after it had become a best seller. Captain Painvin had a similar position in the Paris war office. One of his feats prevented a successful German advance in 1918.

Yardley is a stocky, round-headed, gray-eyed Indianan. Painvin is a swarthy, tall and cultured Frenchman. Neither spoke the other's language and Gelett Burgess acted as interpreter. Both started from scratch, knowing nothing of the art of cryptography, and became world experts.

With the abolishment of the Black Chamber, America no longer has such experts as Yardley and Painvin. Painvin is president of an electric corporation. Yardley is doing cinema and fiction. It seems a travesty that neither of these experts practises this fascinating calling at a time it might be needed. Their retirement is something over which advocates of preparedness should go into a huddle.

Some feminist must have had a hand in the town naming of my native state of Missouri. In an old atlas today I found these postoffice addresses: Mabel, Cora, Pearl, Beulah, Victoria, Patsy, Angeline, Grace, Myrtle, Christine, Tina, Opal, Eunice, Hattie, Lulu, Elberta, Agnes, Belle, Isabelle and Ethel.

One of Broadway's stock hilarities is the gorgeous ermine coat owned by a theatrical agent. A popular fellow in stage-wise circles, he is celebrated for always squiring a beauteous doll. As the story goes, on the afternoon of the evening gala he telephones to ask his companion for the event if she has a smart wrap.

The answer is, of course, in the negative. So he tells her he will send one. After theater and dinner in a conspicuous night spot he escorts the vision home and at the door deftly slips the wrap from her shoulders, grins and goes on his way.

So the coat is pretty well known about town now and when he is between two ermine-swathed ladies, as he was a recent night, you can tell which is his by the way he shepherds it through the crowd. And to blazes with the other one!

Incidentally, the renter of those imported limousines which the boys may rent with their initials monogrammed on the door and which have liveried chauffeurs who intone a rising "Very good, sir!" is prospering. He started off with three cars and now has 11. New York!

Arthur Levy, who lends dignity to the blatancy of Broadway press agenting, is the last devotee of the morning boutonniere. For two-score years his lapel has been so decorated. In other days the button-hole bouquet had many exploiters. Foremost perhaps was Thorley, the florist.

Robert Hillard's white carnation was as well known as Morris Gest's shaggy Pekes. The banker, Charles Mitchell, indulged a posey, too. And there was the shy sentimentalist, Mayn Klew, who carried a flower in his coat pocket to sniff at intervals.

Thingumabobs: Major Bowes' country place is "Laurel Hill" . . . Bud Fisher was the first cartoonist to own an automobile . . . Ted Shayward, West Virginia publisher of country weeklies, gives Park avenue breakfasts featuring water-ground corn meal cakes . . . John Chapman says Johnny Weismuller likes to throw a party but does not mention her name . . . Ishbel Ross has finished a biographical volume about women in newspaper work.

A lady from Gallipolis tells of visiting one of those oh, so very British avenue shops where the clerks give the "a" thata. She bought a gift which she asked be sent to Gallipolis and started to spell it. The "clerk" glanced about quickly, shucked his Oxonion accent and whispered: "Never mind. I was born in Wheeling."

Lure of Worlds Afar

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Insatiably curious little man wants to peek into every corner, into every remote dust-bin and attic recess of the universe. His new 200-inch glass eye, just finished at Corning, will give him a look out into space of 1,200,000,000 light years — one such year being the distance covered by light in one year, traveling at the rate of 186,000 miles a second.

Edwin C. Hill

And, of course, the tiny cosmic kibitzer won't be satisfied with that. He'll make a bigger lens. He's like an amoeba in Siberia, curious about Australia and insisting on having a look at it—though never the twain shall meet.

The big planetariums have stirred up the sky-gazers a lot. Up around Central Park in New York, particularly in the Planetarium neighborhood, you see more dignified old chaps with big telescope—for only a nickel a look you can glimpse worlds possibly better than this one.

STAB GAZERS INCREASE

One old man, wearing a quaint stock and a flat hat, which made him look like the schoolbook pictures of Herschel, said he was doing lots of business, and he didn't think the Planetarium had anything to do with it.

"People get to feeling that maybe this world was some kind of a mistake and they want to forget it. They think maybe Mars, for instance, is a nice spot, where a man could get regular work at reasonable hours and wages. It's a funny thing. Lots of my customers are men who look like they might just have cadged the nickel they pay for a look through the telescope.

"Most of them seem lonely, and many of them are queer, bewildered people who seem to want to get their bearings, like a man climbing a tree in a forest. Some of them are goofy, and it's astonishing how many fanatical believers there are in that old 'cellular cosmogony' theory. The universe is a hollow shell and the stars are stuck on the inside of it, with the earth swinging somehow in the middle of the contraption.

"Funny looking people come along, squint through the telescope and make me dizzy explaining that theory. I often wonder how it got started and what keeps it going. Yes, most of them are lonely souls."

But there are plenty of informed amateurs, more and more of them, in fact, peering into the heavens and helping to shove back the frontiers of man's knowledge. Dr. Clyde Fisher, Curator of Astronomy at the Museum of Natural History, is the founder and head of the Amateur Astronomers' Association, with somewhere around 300 members.

GRIND OWN LENSES

Many of these amateurs grind their own lenses, which are from two to ten inches in diameter—not big enough to add much to astronomical knowledge, but all of them bigger than the lens used by Galileo. The largest lens in town is the one at Columbia University—12 inches.

It's quite a wrench from the old telescope man's queer, lonely people to the most magnificent astronomical discovery—in some ways the noblest outreach of the mind, but there's a sequence there. That was the discovery of the planet Neptune by Urbian Joseph Leverrier.

As a newspaper reporter, I have often tried to think of what story in history I would like to have covered and how I would have handled it. That Neptune story is pretty nearly the favorite. Along in 1845, Leverrier observed Uranus, the outermost known planet, running a bit off schedule. Some regrant comets were kicking up a disturbance in that neighborhood, a billion or so miles down the cosmic land.

A DRAMATIC DISCOVERY

His accounted for the comet, but there was something else. Four years of calculus, in which he had nothing but the law of gravitation and the Uranian aberration to work on, gave him a tiny spot in the heavens where there ought to be a new planet, of a certain weight and speed, at a certain instant on the evening of September 23, 1846.

But the German, J. G. Galle, also had covered the same ground. At that mathematically determined instant, the big telescopes in France and Germany swung on that sidereal pin-prick, and there was Neptune, 2,793,500,000 miles away, running on time, and meeting all the specifications of the calculus as to weight and density.

That Corning lens would have picked out Neptune with no trouble at all. That means plenty of progress in 55 years, but have those passing decades turned up a brain comparable to Leverrier's?

U. S. Inviting Trouble

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Congressman Ludlow of Indiana apparently labors under the hallucination that this system of government—the government of the Constitution—has been overthrown and that the American people have transferred their allegiance to an administration of political dictators who seek to govern by the issuances of edicts after the manner of European dictators and Asiatic despots.

SERIOUS ALLEGATIONS

Mr. Ludlow makes public a letter which he has sent to the Department of State in which seemingly serious allegations are made against unnamed American shippers. Mr. Ludlow charges that these shippers are guilty of "violation of the spirit of neutrality."

There is no such thing under the American system of government as the "spirit of neutrality." There are laws and regulations governing neutrality. Those who violate them can be punished if found guilty after fair trial in the courts.

There is no provision of the Constitution and no law passed in accord with the Constitution which authorizes any official of the American Government to order any American citizen to adopt "the spirit of neutrality" toward any question, foreign or domestic. Such an order would be an indefensible violation of all the principles underlying what we like to believe is American liberty.

Under the American system of government any American Congressman can, if he wishes, make himself a political fetch-and-carry for the British Government, the Japanese Government, the League of Nations or any war-breeding alliance before which he elects to abase himself.

If Mr. Ludlow has any information that any American shipper is guilty of violating the laws governing the issuance of neutrality, he ought to submit his evidence to the Department of Justice. If he possesses such evidence and fails to submit it, the Department of Justice would be well warranted in hauling him into court to compel him to offer such evidence.

Doubtless the reason why Mr. Ludlow has rushed into print with his threatening letter is because he knows full well that he has no evidence of violations of law and that the group of propagandists who will now give his letter circulation, if they do not instigate its writing, are unable to produce any such evidence.

There are two high officials of the Government at both ends of Constitution Avenue have on more than one occasion in recent months issued statements in regard to neutrality which indicated they are suffering from the same hallucination that afflicts Mr. Ludlow.

These statements are being used by the British Government to make it appear in Europe that the United States is supporting Great Britain's "starve-Italy" campaign.

MISLEADING STATEMENTS

If the Government of the United States is to set an example for the people in obeying the laws governing neutrality it will stop the issuance of such misleading statements and it will make it perfectly clear to the American people that the traditional policy of American neutrality does not require American citizens to do more than to obey the laws and regulations for the enforcement of such a policy. They neither mortgage their freedom of opinion or speech by giving obedience to such laws and regulations.

Marital Reciprocity: I won't do any backseat driving in the car, if you won't do any "efficiency expert" stuff around the kitchen.

Now and then, you meet a married couple who seem so much in love with each other that you suspect them of being casual acquaintances who have struck up a flirtation.

Books are constantly being published on the Art of Love-Making. But apparently they are read only by women. The average modern Romeo does not seem to have digested their contents.

One of woman's bright little day-dreams is that she can change a man's ways after marriage. But the only way in which a man ever changes is to grow "more so" as the years go on.

A man never forgets the first woman he ever loved. His difficulty consists in trying to remember all those who came between the first and the last.

Tell a man just ONCE that you love him. After that, it is wiser to keep on assuring him that he loves YOU—because, after all, that is the only thing about which he has any doubt.
